

Nixon Withheld Evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon admitted Monday that he withheld Watergate evidence from Congress and his own lawyers. The new evidence that Nixon made public shows that he authorized an attempt to thwart an FBI Watergate investigation.

Nixon also acknowledged that his impeachment by the House is "virtually a foregone conclusion" and that he will stand trial in the Senate.

Referring to his failure to turn over the evidence, Nixon said it was a "serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility and which I deeply regret."

Nixon's statement and the disclosure of three new transcripts evoked strong negative reactions and calls for resignation or impeachment from members of Congress, including some of those hitherto most steadfast in the President's defense.

One transcript shows that within a week after the June 17, 1972, Watergate break-in, Nixon okayed a plan by his top aide to use the Central Intelligence Agency to blunt the FBI's investigation.

The transcript also shows that White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman then told Nixon that his campaign director, John N. Mitchell, may have had some general prior knowledge of the wiretapping and break-in.

He said Mitchell and White House Counsel John W. Dean III had suggested getting top CIA officials to tell acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray III to "Stay the hell out of this," Nixon concurred.

The latest developments were surrounded by strong reaction's from defenders of the President.

—Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., who led the President's defense on the House Judiciary Committee, called for Nixon's impeachment.

—Rep. Wiley Mayne, R-Iowa, another supporter on the committee, said he is reversing his previous position and also will vote for impeachment.

—Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., the Republican whip in the Senate, called for Nixon to resign. Griffin made his statement before Nixon revealed the latest transcript.

—Vice President Gerald R. Ford, previously a vocal advocate of the President's innocence, said he would no longer discuss impeachment in public "until the facts are more fully available."

In a written statement, Nixon said the transcripts show that his efforts six days after the Watergate break-in to limit the FBI's investigation on grounds that CIA secrets might be compromised show "I was aware of the advantages this course of action would have with respect to limiting public exposure of involvement by persons connected with" his re-election committee.

The President said he did not tell his staff or lawyers about the content of taped conversations held on June 23, 1972, with H. R. Haldeman, then White House chief of staff.

"This was a serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility and which I deeply regret," he said.

The House GOP minority leader, John J. Rhodes of Arizona, said "The apparent attempt to use the CIA to cover up the depth of the Watergate conspiracy is shocking . . . It seems to me this disclosure makes a quick House vote on impeachment an imperative, in the best interests of our country."

"I will continue to counsel with Republican members of the House as to the best course of action for all of us to take, and have scheduled a news conference for Wednesday," Rhodes said.

Nixon's Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, met later with Senate Republican leaders and, emerging from the session, said he was "not prepared to discuss" the possibility that he may quit as a result of the President's failure to inform him of the additional evidence.

That evidence, according to Nixon's statement, is "at variance with certain of my previous statements."

He cited specifically his previous claim that efforts to restrict the FBI inquiry of the burglary at Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate were based solely on national security grounds.

He went on:

"In order to insure that no other significant relevant materials are withheld, I shall voluntarily furnish to the Senate everything" from 64 tapes, ordered surrendered by the Supreme Court, which U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica "rules should go to the special prosecutor."

In an April 29 television address, Nixon stated that White House-edited transcripts of Watergate conversations, then being made public, contained all relevant information regarding his role in the matter. He said he listened to two of the June 23 tapes "shortly after that, in May."

Nixon, who has been secluded for more than a week listening to the 64 tapes which he must surrender under the Supreme Court order, said in his statement:

"My review of the additional tapes has, so far, shown no other major inconsistencies with what I have previously submitted. While I have no way at this stage of being certain that there will not be others, I have no reason to believe that there will be. In any case, the tapes in their entirety are now in the process of being furnished to Judge Sirica."

Nixon said, "I realize that this additional material I am now furnishing may further damage my case, especially because attention will be drawn separately to it rather than to the evidence in its entirety."

Judge Gives Go-Ahead To Transmatic System

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The Transmatic Money System at two Lincoln Hinky-Dinky stores was approved Monday by Lancaster District Judge Herbert Ronin.

Ronin said that American Community Stores (ACS), doing business as Hinky-Dinky, is not engaged in a banking or savings and loan function and therefore is not in violation of Nebraska's banking laws.

In an action brought by Nebraska Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer, the state contended that Hinky-Dinky's acceptance of deposits and paying funds in behalf of First Federal Lincoln are "essential elements of the banking business or the building and loan business."

The state contended that such functions are forbidden except to corporations especially authorized by law to engage in banking and savings and loan business.

Function Limited

Judge Ronin said that Hinky-Dinky does not retain deposits, promise to repay them or lend them to others, and that its activity is restricted to fund transfers between First Federal and its depositors.

He ruled that the actions of Hinky-Dinky and First Federal Lincoln have been specifically authorized by regulation of a federal agency and do not violate state banking laws.

The Transmatic Money System enables depositors of First Federal to make deposits into and withdrawals from their savings accounts by means of computer terminals located in the two Hinky-Dinky supermarkets.

Not In Operation

Hinky-Dinky and First Federal officials decided not to operate the system until after the court made a final determination in the case even though the restraining order was later dissolved.

The two Lincoln stores involved in the Transmatic System are located at 59th and Adams and 17th and South.

Hinky-Dinky did advertise that it would open new accounts for First Federal, but this service was never put into effect.

Judge Ronin noted that in a similar case against Hinky-Dinky in Omaha, a restraining order was issued by the Douglas County District Court but was later dissolved with that court stating that it "seriously questioned whether the acts of ACS constituted the business of banking."

Kansas Opinion

Judge Ronin also said that the attorney general of Kansas has also issued an opinion that such an operation doesn't constitute banking business.

Another authority approving the activity, and that it did not constitute either banking or savings and loan business, is the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (FHLBB), Judge Ronin said.

"As a federal agency with exclusive jurisdiction over federal savings and loan associations, the FHLBB's interpretation of its governing statutes is entitled to considerable weight and should be followed unless there are compelling reasons that it is clearly wrong," Judge Ronin stated.

Since FHLBB authorized First Federal to operate the system on an experimental basis, the case has attracted nationwide interest.

Trial May End Here This Week

The Wounded Knee trial of defendants Gregorio Jaramillo and Michael Sturdevant may end this week in U.S. District Court.

According to a spokesman for the Wounded Knee Defense-Offense Committee, only two more witnesses will be called as the defense finishes presenting its evidence.

Closing arguments by the prosecution and the defense are tentatively set for Thursday. The prosecution, the first side to present evidence, finished that task several weeks ago.

Former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst has been rescheduled to testify Wednesday. He had been scheduled to testify Tuesday.

Reis Kash, an associate director of the U.S. Marshal Service, has been slated for Tuesday, replacing Kleindienst.

According to an earlier understanding between the prosecution and the defense, Jaramillo and Sturdevant will not be giving up the right to defend themselves under the Treaty of 1868, although the defense will rest its case.

If Judge Warren K. Urbom would find the defendants guilty, that finding would not be final until he has ruled on the treaty defense.

Still under discussion is a plan under which Urbom would hear the treaty defense only once, with his ruling on the treaty binding on all defendants.

That plan would require the agreement of all defendants, the prosecution and Urbom himself.

A major element of the treaty defense appears to be a claim that federal officers did not have a right to be on the Pine Ridge Reservation.

The trial of Jaramillo and Sturdevant began July 1 and has been in progress since then, with the exception of a one-week recess.

One hundred and fifteen defendants are still awaiting trial in connection with the 71-day occupation of Wounded Knee in the spring of 1973.

Jaramillo and Sturdevant are charged with impeding or attempting to impede federal officers during a civil disorder, trying to sneak into Wounded Knee with ammunition.

Embassies Blame Soviets For Berlin Traffic Delays

MOSCOW (AP) — Ambassadors of the United States, Britain and France made formal protests Monday to the Soviet Union over recent interference with Western access to Berlin.

Communist East Germany has been delaying traffic on highways linking West Germany and West Berlin following establishment of a West German environment agency in West Berlin two weeks ago. The Soviet bloc maintains that West German creation of the agency in Berlin runs counter to the four-power agreement for the city.

The three Moscow embassies declined to give details, but in Washington a State Department spokesman said the embassies had delivered oral protests that the traffic delays violated the 1971 four-power agreement on Berlin.

American and British spokesmen in the Soviet capital said only that their ambassadors had called at the Soviet Foreign Ministry in connection with Berlin. The French Embassy said its charge d'affaires had made a similar call.

The latest Berlin difficulties prompted the United States last week to break off talks with East Germany on establishing relations between the two countries. Until then the diplomatic negotiations had appeared to be successful and indications were that embassies would soon be opened.

In holding up traffic on the Berlin transit routes, East German border guards have questioned travelers in an effort to identify and turn back employees of the environment agency.

Bonn Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has warned that East Germany could be trying to raise itself to the status of a Berlin agreement power through its interference with transit traffic. Signers of the agreement are the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

A State Department spokesman said the Western allies hold the Soviet Union responsible for violations of the four-power agreement resulting from interference with travel.

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said the interference with traffic on routes entering Berlin continues. He cited a bus with passengers held for more than 90 minutes over the weekend.

Martin For Resignation; Curtis Backs Nixon

By The Associated Press

Republican Congressman Dave Martin of Nebraska said Monday the best thing for the country would be for President Nixon to resign.

Responding to the president's admission that he kept Watergate statements from the public and his lawyers, Martin said, "I think it's all over with the president."

Martin, who represents Nebraska's traditionally conservative 3rd District, told The Associated Press from his Washington office that there is no doubt the president would be impeached in the House.

Martin said, "I don't know whether he will resign. My personal contacts say he's not built that way. But in view of the overwhelming evidence, maybe he will reconsider."

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., said he felt Nixon "did the right thing in correcting the record now" when Nixon acknowledged that new tape transcripts he was releasing may further damage his impeachment case.

The President, in a statement accompanying the transcripts of three more Watergate-related tapes, conceded that his impeachment by the House of Representatives is "virtually a foregone conclusion."

Curtis declared: "I do not know how much his previous statements were based on his personal recollection . . . Consequently, I cannot pronounce a judgment on him in reference to that."

Nixon had said parts of the tapes "are at variance with my previous statements."

As to calls by members of Congress that Nixon resign, Curtis said "I believe that if any member of Congress feels that he ought to resign is that the place to do that is to tell the man personally."

Asked if he could foresee the President's resignation at any time, the Nebraska Republican declared: "I can't foresee the future at all."

Asked if Curtis at any time could issue a statement calling for Nixon's resignation, the senator said "I don't think I'd ever make such a public statement."

Protests Delay City Action On Centrum

By LYNN ZERSCHLING

Star Staff Writer

The City Council held off action Monday on declaring the Centrum block eligible for redevelopment following protests by several property owners that their buildings are not "blighted" or "substandard."

A building condition report, undertaken for the city by consultants Barton-Aschman, says 65% of the buildings in the downtown block are structurally substandard or blighted.

Three of the property owners challenged that report, contending that their buildings meet city code requirements.

Evidence At Issue

At issue is whether the council has the evidence to determine if the block, from N to O, 11th to 12th, is blighted. Such a decision would open the door for the city to raze the block and construct a parking garage and bus terminal. It also would allow private developers to build retail outlets.

Attorney Ed Perry claimed that the consultants, who rated an apartment building on N and the Guarantee Clothing store on O, conducted that test on a quick, 15-minute run-through.

"I don't think they could do the job in that time," said Perry, who represented Herb Whitman and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Nefsky.

Attorneys No Proof

Perry also claimed that the consultants did not prove that the buildings would be "detrimental to the public health, safety and welfare."

In order for the city to declare the block eligible for redevelopment under state law, the city must show that a predominance of buildings are affected by dilapidation, deterioration, age or obsolescence and the block is detrimental to the public health, safety and welfare.

Perry charged that he knows of no facts which indicate the buildings are a "menace" to the public.

Ira Beynon, attorney for John D. McDonald, asked the council to show him the deficiencies in the two shoe stores his client owns, which frame Woolworth's on O St.

Cross-Examination Asked

Beynon said property owners should be given an opportunity to cross-examine the consultants and to bring in experts of their own to dispute Barton-Aschman's testimony.

Elmer Beatty, manager of one of those shoe stores, acknowledged that no major remodeling has been undertaken in his store and others due to the uncertainty of the Centrum project.

When asked by Councilwoman Helen Boosalis if the second floor of the shoe store were vacant, Beatty said it was. He reported that there is no way to reach that floor — there are no stairs.

In response to the charges, City Atty. Dick Wood said that it was the quality of the time spent in inspecting the buildings, not the amount of time, which counts. Both interior and exterior surveys were made.

Wood said Barton-Aschman consultants spent up to an hour evaluating the buildings.

He maintained that the consultants are professionals. "You're entitled to rely on their expert judgment," he said.

Block As Whole

Furthermore, Wood advised the councilman that they are charged with evaluating the condition of the block as a whole.

For the Centrum block to meet the substandard and blighted definitions laid down by state law, Wood explained, "That doesn't mean the area warrants being closed as a public nuisance."

Support for the project came from Dick White, chairman of the Downtown Advisory Committee (DAC) and the Lincoln Center Development Association.

DAC has billed the Centrum as being the catalyst to rejuvenating the central business district.

The council delayed a decision to give members time to study the building data compiled by Barton-Aschman and to receive reports from city departments on the condition of the 20 buildings in that block.

President Objects, But Signs

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon Monday signed — but sharply criticized — a $22.2 billion military bill providing money for U.S. defense projects and funds to pay for military aircraft for South Vietnam.

Nixon said he had "serious reservations" about the procurement authorization bill because one provision constituted "an unconstitutional exercise of legislative power."

He was referring to a section which would allow Congress to disapprove a presidential decision by concurrent resolution of the House and Senate on exporting certain goods and technology to specific countries.

The passage to which Nixon objected appeared to give Congress the authority to overrule a decision to provide technology on atomic energy such as the administration provided recently to Israel and Egypt.

Bill Repeals No-Knock

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a drug-control bill Monday authorizing $480 million for a three-year continuation of the 1970 Controlled Substances Act while repealing the law's controversial no-knock provision.

The no-knock feature permits federal judges to issue warrants authorizing Justice Department agents to break into residences unannounced for searches in cases where it is believed the property being sought would be quickly destroyed or the agents would be in danger if they knocked before entering.

The House Commerce Committee said there have been "several instances in which Department of Justice enforcement agents, in their eagerness to crush illicit trafficking, have mistakenly broken into the homes and apartments of dozens of innocent families, terrorizing the occupants and heavily damaging property."

In its report on the bill, the committee said it feels widespread use of the no-knock provision indicated "a lack of discretion and attention to alternative methods of securing evidence on the part of the Department of Justice."

Spending Cut Urged

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, said cutting federal spending to eliminate "senseless waste" is a major step that must be taken to combat inflation.

President Objects, But Signs

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon Monday signed — but sharply criticized — a $22.2 billion military bill providing money for U.S. defense projects and funds to pay for military aircraft for South Vietnam.

Nixon said he had "serious reservations" about the procurement authorization bill because one provision constituted "an unconstitutional exercise of legislative power."

He was referring to a section which would allow Congress to disapprove a presidential decision by concurrent resolution of the House and Senate on exporting certain goods and technology to specific countries.

The passage to which Nixon objected appeared to give Congress the authority to overrule a decision to provide technology on atomic energy such as the administration provided recently to Israel and Egypt.

House Members Hear Tapes Prior To Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House tapes began a week-long run in the House Monday to give members a chance to hear them before voting on impeachment of President Nixon.

In four rooms rigged with sound equipment and a total of 204 headsets, 19 tapes of Nixon's conversations with various White House aides are being played from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Members emerging from the first presentation of four Watergate tapes Monday reacted generally along party lines, with Republicans noncommittal and Democrats reporting their suspicions of Nixon's involvement in the Watergate cover-up confirmed.

'Damn Discouraging'

One Republican who spoke out was Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y. After three hours of listening he said "it's damn discouraging when you hear this first hand. You begin to realize the conniving, the things you wouldn't think a President would be dealing with."

Peyser said he is leaning toward an impeachment vote. Another Republican, Jack Edwards of Alabama, who said he would like to vote against impeachment, said he hadn't heard anything on the tapes that changed his position.

"I didn't hear anything that suggests the President had any inkling that anything was amiss in the White House," Edwards said.

Eight of the tapes being played are among those for which the White House has released edited transcripts. The committee has also made transcripts and the members were given one to follow as they listened to the tapes.

"You can tell a lot more about the motives and the sincerity of the people talking when you hear them instead of just reading the transcripts," said Rep. David Bowen, D-Miss. Uncommitted on impeachment, he said he intends to listen to all 19 tapes.

Some Uncommitted

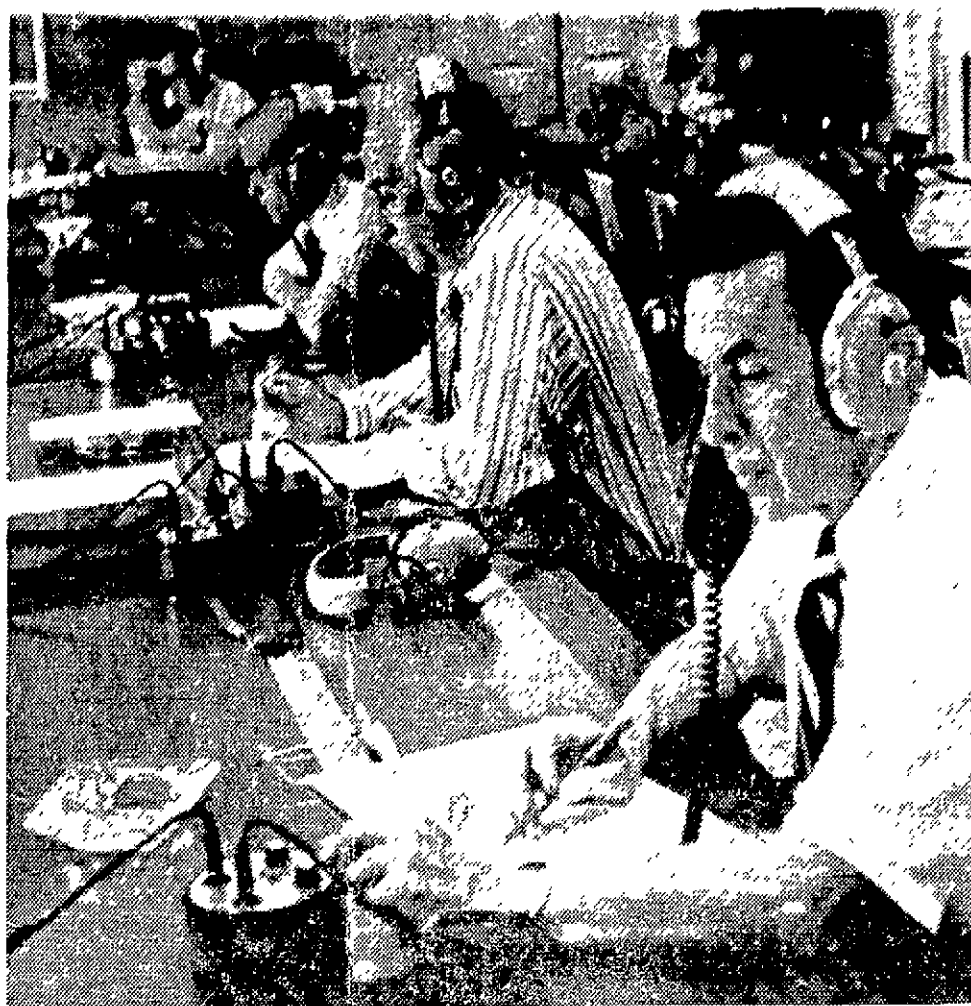

Rep. Edward Roush, D-Ind., also uncommitted, said he found listening to the tapes helpful. "You get the tone of the meeting — and that can tell you more than the words," he said.

Rep. Edward Koch, D-N.Y., said, "It just confirms what I've been hearing from other sources all along." The tawdriness of it. There are a lot of low class people in that White House."

Rep. Fred Rooney, D-Pa., who said he was leaning toward impeachment before listening to the tapes, reported he was "absolutely shocked" at what he heard.

"The President's involvement in the Watergate cover-up is clearly there," he said.

Besides listening to the tapes, the members are reading in the 18 volumes of evidence released by the committee.

LISTENING TO TAPES . . . made available by House Judiciary Committee are, from right, Reps. Edward Boland, D-Mass., Edwards, William Steiger, R-Wis., and David Obey, D-Wis.

Nixon Authorized Use Of CIA To Blunt FBI Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within a week of the Watergate break-in President Nixon was told that his campaign director John N. Mitchell may have had some prior knowledge of the wiretapping, and Nixon authorized use of the Central Intelligence Agency to blunt an FBI investigation of the affair.

The new evidence is contained in transcripts of three White House conversations which the President released on Monday, conceding that they may damage his chances to survive impeachment.

Nixon said it is almost a foregone conclusion that the House will vote to impeach him, leading to a trial in the Senate.

Girl Falls 10 Stories But Lives

NEW YORK (AP) — A 2-year-old girl fell 10 stories and lived Monday, after locking her mother out of their Harlem apartment, police said.

Sharay Vaughan, who apparently landed in a clump of bushes, was treated at Harlem Hospital for a broken ankle.

A hospital spokesman said the child had been placed in the pediatric intensive care unit, as a precaution.

meeting between Nixon and his chief of staff H. R. Haldeman on June 23, 1972, the two men are quoted as speaking about the break-in at Democratic national headquarters six days earlier.

"Well, what the hell did Mitchell know about this?" Nixon asked his chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

"I think so," Haldeman replied. "I don't think he knew the details, but I think he knew."

"He didn't know how it was going to be handled though —" Nixon said. "Well, who was the asshole that did?"

Haldeman said that G. Gordon Liddy, a former White House aide later convicted as the ringleader of the wiretappers, was under pressure "to get more information, and as he got more pressure, he pushed the people harder to move harder —"

Nixon: Pressure from Mitchell?

Haldeman: Apparently.

Haldeman: Yeah.

Haldeman told the President that the FBI was "not under control" in its investigation of the break-in. He said L. Patrick Gray, acting FBI director at the time, wasn't sure how to control an investigation that was threatening to trace money from the pockets of the Watergate burglars back to campaign checks given to the Nixon campaign committees.

Haldeman said the FBI probe was "leading into some productive areas," and threatened to trace money found on the Watergate burglars back to some checks donated to the President's re-election committee by a group of Texans and by Kenneth Dahlberg of Minneapolis.

"It goes in some directions we don't want it to go," Haldeman said.

He said Mitchell and White House Counsel John W. Dean III had come up with a plan to get CIA Deputy Director Vernon Walters to call Gray and say "Stay the hell out of this."

Haldeman said this would give Gray a pretext to call off the investigation.

Nixon suggested the possibility of getting the donors of the campaign money to say, falsely, that they had been asked for it by some of the Cuban-Americans who were caught in the burglary. But Haldeman said this would involve too many people.

"That's the problem, and they'll (the FBI) stop if we take this other route," he said.

Nixon: All right.

Haldeman: And you seem to think the thing to do is get them to stop?

Nixon: Right, fine.

Haldeman: They say the only way to do that is from White House instructions . . . The proposal would be that (John D.) Ehrlichman and I call them in and say, ah —

Nixon: All right, fine.

Later that day, according to previous testimony, Ehrlichman and Haldeman met with CIA Director Richard Helms and deputy director Walters. Walters was ordered to meet with the FBI chief and tell Gray that further attempts to trace the money might endanger CIA operations in Mexico.

Nixon told Haldeman to use the name of E. Howard Hunt to help persuade Walters and Helms to cooperate, but Haldeman didn't do it.

Hunt had been a CIA employee involved in the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, and later joined the White House staff where he helped engineer the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office, using some CIA equipment. His name already had surfaced in news reports linking him to the Watergate burglary. Later he pleaded guilty in the Watergate case.

Nixon suggested that an investigation of Hunt would "uncover a lot of things."

He suggested that Haldeman tell the CIA officials, "You open that scab and there's a hell of a lot of things and we just feel that it would be very detrimental to have this thing go any further. This involves these Cubans, Hunt, and a lot of hanky-panky that we had nothing to do with ourselves."

At a second meeting on June 23, just before Haldeman met with the CIA men, Nixon told him again to use Hunt's name.

"Just say, (unintelligible) very bad to have this fellow Hunt, ah, he knows too damned much, if he was involved . . . The Cuba thing, it would be a fiasco. It would make the CIA look bad, it's going to make Hunt look bad, and it is likely to blow the whole Bay of Pigs thing which we think would be very unfortunate — both for the CIA, and for the country, at this time, and for American foreign policy. Just tell them to lay off."

Haldeman: "Yep. That's the basis to do it on. Just leave it at that."

But Haldeman reported after the meeting that he hadn't followed Nixon's suggestion, and that he hadn't mentioned Hunt's name at all.

Nevertheless, Walters later told Gray, falsely, that the FBI's investigation was threatening to uncover CIA operations in Mexico.

This stymied the investigation temporarily, but Gray kept pressing Walters to put his words into writing, which Walters refused to do. Finally, Walters told Gray that actually there was no CIA involvement in Watergate, and the FBI probe went forward.

At that time, Gray personally warned Nixon that men around him were trying to "mortally wound" him by using the FBI and the CIA. Gray said he was surprised that Nixon didn't ask whom he was talking about.

N.Y. Times Summary

Saigon Embassy Criticized

Washington — The United States Embassy in Saigon was criticized by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for adhering too closely to the official Saigon government line in its reports to Washington. "Over the years," a committee staff study on Vietnam said, "the American Embassy in Saigon has acquired a reputation, among both officials and unofficial observers, for close identification with the policies of the South Vietnamese government and for selective reporting," and added that "these same tendencies are apparent today."

'It's Downhill' For Nixon

Washington — "I just think he loses. I just think everything is downhill," said Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, one of the key Republican senators who said they believe that President Nixon's release of more Watergate transcripts would weaken his defense in what they expect may be an expedited Senate trial.

Vacation Cut Short

New York — Declaring that he wanted to "clear away the smoke screen which had been created," New York City Controller Harrison J. Goldin cut short a European vacation and held a news conference to defend his charges against the city's investigation commissioner, Nicholas Scopetta, in the continuing controversy over audits and ledgers in the controller's office.

Sisco Picked Up Phone . . .

Athens — Just two weeks ago, U.S. Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco was trying to negotiate a cease-fire on Cyprus between Greece and Turkey. After repeated but unsuccessful attempts to reach civilian officials in Athens, Sisco called military headquarters. He got Adm. Arapakis, the naval chief of staff, and asked him, "Do you speak for Gen. Ioannides?" When the admiral said yes, the military dictatorship that had ruled Greece for seven years was doomed. Although all the details are not yet clear, it appears that Gen. Ioannides destroyed himself.

U.N. Force Pushed Around

Nicosia — Not since Egypt ordered the U.N. Emergency Force to leave the cease-fire lines with Israel in 1967, before the six-day war, has a U.N. peace-keeping group been pushed around so unceremoniously as on Cyprus. The force has suffered 23 casualties and has been shot at by both the Greeks and Turks.

Punishment Promised

Lisbon — After announcing program to free Portugal's colonies, Portuguese military leaders served notice that those who discredit the armed forces will be severely punished.

Guerrilla Criticizes Faisal

Beirut — A prominent Arab guerrilla leader Monday underscored the deteriorating relations between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Arab regimes when he criticized King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and warned against attempts at sabotaging the commando movements position in Lebanon.

IBEW Strikes At Ten Plants ... Of Western Electric

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers struck Western Electric Co. plants in eight states Monday after rejecting a tentative nationwide settlement covering 700,000 other telephone company employes.

Negotiators representing IBEW members at Western Electric, the manufacturing arm of the Bell System, called the national agreement inadequate.

Picket lines went up at 10 plants, including three in the Chicago area, and at Omaha, Neb., Columbus, Ohio, Shreveport, La., Oklahoma City, Indianapolis, Kearny, N.J., and Allentown, Pa. About 50,000 workers were involved, the company said.

Eight other Western Electric plants whose workers are represented by the Communications Workers of America were unaffected, as were facilities where IBEW contracts had not yet expired.

The 500,000-member CWA, together with the Alliance of Independent Telephone Unions, reached tentative agreement on a new three-year contract Sunday night only hours before a threatened nationwide strike against the Bell System. The pact also included IBEW members employed by the Bell operating companies.

The tentative agreement, which requires rank-and-file approval, will cost the company an estimated $3 billion and boost wages and benefits by 35.8 per cent over three years, according to union and company officials. Chief federal mediator W. J. Usery Jr., who had a hand in bringing about the settlement, said he regretted that time ran out before all issues could be resolved in the separate Western Electric talks. However, Usery added he was confident that the strike "can be ended shortly."

A Western Electric spokesman called the strike "unfortunate because we believe the offer is fair and substantial." He said negotiations were continuing.

There is a possibility that if the IBEW negotiates a fatter settlement with Western Electric, Bell System workers may reject the national agreement when it is put to a vote later this month and thus force the reopening of national talks.

Western Electric manufactures items including cables, central office machinery used in switching calls for large concerns and data transmission sets. A spokesman said the strike would have little immediate impact, but a lengthy walkout could effect installation of commercial office communication systems.

According to the company, the national settlement provides for first-year wage increases ranging from about 7.1 to 10.7 per cent. Pay hikes of 7.5 per cent plus increases tied to changes in the Consumer Price Index are offered in the second and third years.

In addition, the contract provides for major improvements in pensions, a company-paid dental plan and better health insurance.

The union also won, where state laws permit, a full agency shop, an issue the company fought bitterly for years. By January 1976, all employees in bargaining units will now be required to pay union dues whether they are union members or not.

Omaha Plant Struck

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Striking members of Local 1974, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) brought production at the Western Electric plant here to a standstill Monday.

It is the first strike in the Omaha works' 16-year history.

The local, which has about 5,000 members, walked off the job late Sunday night, after negotiators on a national contract failed to come to an agreement on a new three-year contract.

The firm's old contract with the union expired July 18.

A crowd of about 500 gathered outside the plant here Monday morning as some 1,000 office and supervisory workers went to their jobs.

Officials said there were some attempts to block the driveway at the plant's main entrance, but that police were on hand to direct traffic.

No incidents were reported.

The plant here produces telephone cable and switching equipment.

Whitney Clark, vice president of Local 1974, did not speculate on how long the strike would last.

The major points of disagreement center on wage and fringe increases.

The union claims the company's offers are not enough to offset the past year's cost of living increases due to inflation.

Firing Heavy At 'Othello's Tower'

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A shootout Monday night between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in the eastern port of Famagusta broke the tenuous cease-fire in Cyprus.

The cease-fire appeared to be taking hold throughout the island earlier in the day. An official spokesman for a joint British, Greek and Turkish commission charged with drawing lines between invading Turkish troops and the Cypriot national guard said Monday night it "had reached provisional agreement on a substantial part of the eastern area" of the boundary.

A spokesman for the United Nations peacekeeping force reported heavy firing for three hours around the medieval fort in old Famagusta overlooking the main port and warehouse facilities on Cyprus.

No casualty figures were available.

Greek Cypriot troops who are besieging about 11,000 Turkish Cypriot refugees in the fort, had claimed for the past two nights that the Turks were foraging outside the walls to seize goods from the port's warehouses.

U.N. sources said it appeared the Greek Cypriots had lain in ambush for the Turks and then opened fire on them. The sources said other Turks on the high battlements of "Othello's Tower" overlooking the port provided covering fire for the Turks.

The tower, a massive circular keep, is where — according to tradition and Shakespeare — Othello, a black Moorish general in the Venetian army, strangled his beautiful Venetian wife Desdemona in a fit of jealousy.

Before the Famagusta shooting, U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar said that for the first time since the Geneva cease-fire accord was signed July 30 no shooting had been reported anywhere on Cyprus.

Associated Press Special Correspondent Peter Arnett reported from the northern coastal city of Kyrenia that shooting there had ceased for the first time in six days.

A British air force helicopter with Turkish, Greek and British officers aboard landed in the swirling dust of the eastern Kyrenian foothills, where sporadic fighting had marred the cease-fire signed six days ago.

The officers, members of the tripartite commission attempting to draw up an official cease-fire line, and United Nations officials, met with Turkish troops in sight of the Greek Cypriot lines further up the mountain slope.

On the diplomatic front, continued Greek and Turkish charges of cease-fire violations made it uncertain whether either side would attend the second round of the Geneva peace talks scheduled to begin Thursday.

Turkish Foreign Minister

Turan Guner said Monday in Ankara that Turkey considers it "useless" to attend the conference unless all the provisions agreed to in the first round of talks are observed.

The Turks have complained of Greek Cypriot refusal to turn over Turkish villages and enclaves under their control.

"The Turkish government does not intend to postpone the second phase of the talks on some excuse, but we feel that we should not waste time with conferences if the decisions taken there are not going to be enforced," Guner told newsmen in Ankara.

A Turkish Cypriot spokesman told a group of Turkish newsmen flown in from the mainland Monday that 92 Turkish Cypriot communities continue to be surrounded by Greek Cypriot troops and that food and medical supplies have not been allowed in.

The Greek government also has threatened to boycott the talks unless Turkish troops obey the cease-fire on Cyprus and not attempt to extend their area of control. Greek Cypriots have also complained about the Turks' treatment of Greek Cypriot civilians.

'Mama' Cass Was Too Fat

LONDON (AP) — "Mama" Cass Elliot lost 70 pounds in the last few months of her life but a British coroner's report Monday said the effort was too little, too late.

"She weighed twice as much as she should have," pathologist Keith Simpson told an inquest at Westminster Coroner's Court. "One of her heart muscles had turned to fat."

Coroner Gavin Thurston recorded that the 33-year-old, 5-foot-9 singer died of natural causes. She was found naked in bed, propped up against two pillows, last Monday in a luxury apartment she was living in during a London concert tour.

Concurring in the pathologist's report, Thurston declared death was caused by "part of the heart muscle turning to fat due to obesity."

Mama Cass's manager, Allan Carr, testified that her weight had been a problem and of concern to her. He said she had slimmed down from 294 pounds to 224 pounds in the past several months.

Simpson, Britain's top pathologist who conducted the autopsy on the singer, testified that she suffered a heart attack as she tried to rest after a strenuous two-week run at the prestigious London Palladium Theater and a hectic round of show business parties.

"She was grossly overweight," he said. He added that the stress in the last 48 hours of the bouncy singer's life — the acclaim by Palladium audiences and the exhaustion of the parties — may have triggered the fatal heart attack.

Simpson stressed that he found no traces of alcohol or drugs when he examined the body. Nor, he added, did he find anything blocking her mouth or throat — an apparent reference to speculation the singer choked on a ham sandwich found beside the body.

Group Says It Planted Bomb

ROME (AP) — A Neo-Fascist terrorist group claimed on Monday responsibility for a bomb explosion that took 12 lives on an express train heading toward the Austrian frontier Sunday.

The explosion, which occurred as the train was traveling through a 10-mile tunnel between Florence and Bologna, brought pressure on the weak Rome government to crack down on political terrorists.

Italy's powerful leftist-dominated trade unions, denouncing "Fascist barbarity," backed demands for tough action.

One Dead; Six Feared Crushed

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — One person was crushed to death and six others trapped and feared killed Monday when the roof of a federal office building in downtown Miami collapsed, sending tons of concrete and several tion with a series of protest strikes across the nation.

Union leaders in the province of Bologna had earlier called workers out for an eight-hour general strike. Aircraft service personnel at Genoa's airport began a 21-hour walkout. Trains stopped for two hours.

A typewritten note, signed by the Neo-Fascist Black Order and claiming responsibility for the Bologna train bombing, was found in a Bologna telephone booth after an anonymous tip was telephoned to a newspaper.

"We can put bombs where we want, any time, any place, wherever and whenever we want," the note said. "The Nazi flag did not die in Berlin in 1945. It still lives for a powerful, Fascist and Nazi Italy. Nazism will return to save Italy. It will be born again."

The Black Order is one of Italy's newest and most fanatical underground organizations.

Many of the passengers were asleep when the bomb blasted through the fifth car of the 17-car express train, tearing the roof off the car and setting an adjoining car on fire.

IBEW Strikes At Ten Plants ... Of Western Electric

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers struck Western Electric Co. plants in eight states Monday after rejecting a tentative nationwide settlement covering 700,000 other telephone company employees.

Negotiators representing IBEW members at Western Electric, the manufacturing arm of the Bell System, called the national agreement inadequate. Picket lines went up at 10 plants, including three in the Chicago area, and at Omaha, Neb.; Columbus, Ohio; Shreveport, La.; Oklahoma City; Indianapolis; Kearny, N.J.; and Allentown, Pa. About 50,000 workers were involved, the company said.

Eight other Western Electric plants whose workers are represented by the Communications Workers of America were unaffected, as were facilities where IBEW contracts had not yet expired.

The 500,000-member CWA, together with the Alliance of Independent Telephone Unions, reached tentative agreement on a new three-year contract Sunday night only hours before a threatened nationwide strike against the Bell System. The pact also included IBEW members employed by the Bell operating companies.

The tentative agreement, which requires rank-and-file approval, will cost the company an estimated $3 billion and boost wages and benefits by 35.8 percent over three years, according to union and company officials.

Chief federal mediator W. J. Usery Jr., who had a hand in bringing about the settlement, said he regretted that time ran out before all issues could be resolved in the separate Western Electric talks. However, Usery added he was confident that the strike "can be ended shortly."

A Western Electric spokesman called the strike "unfortunate because we believe the offer is fair and substantial." He said negotiations were continuing.

There is a possibility that if the IBEW negotiates a fatter settlement with Western Electric, Bell System workers may reject the national agreement when it is put to a vote later this month and thus force the reopening of national talks.

Western Electric manufactures items including cables, central office machinery used in switching calls for large concerns and data transmission sets. A spokesman said the strike would have little immediate impact, but a lengthy walkout could effect installation of commercial office communication systems.

According to the company, the national settlement provides for first-year wage increases ranging from about 7.1 to 10.7 per cent. Pay hikes of 7.5 per cent plus increases tied to changes in the Consumer Price Index are offered in the second and third years.

In addition, the contract provides for major improvements in pensions, a company-paid dental plan and better health insurance.

The union also won, where state laws permit, a full agency shop, an issue the company fought bitterly for years. By January 1976, all employees in bargaining units will now be required to pay union dues whether they are union members or not.

Omaha Plant Struck

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Striking members of Local 1974, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) brought production at the Western Electric plant here to a standstill Monday.

It is the first strike in the Omaha works' 16-year history.

The local, which has about 5,000 members, walked off the job late Sunday night, after negotiators on a national contract failed to come to an agreement on a new three-year contract.

The firm's old contract with the union expired July 18.

A crowd of about 500 gathered outside the plant here Monday morning as some 1,000 office and supervisory workers went to their jobs.

Officials said there were some attempts to block the driveway at the plant's main entrance, but that police were on hand to direct traffic.

No incidents were reported.

The plant here produces telephone cable and switching equipment.

Whitey Clark, vice president of Local 1974, did not speculate on how long the strike would last.

The major points of disagreement center on wage and fringe increases.

The union claims the company's offers are not enough to offset the past year's cost of living increases due to inflation.

killed and 48 persons, including two Americans, were injured. The train was packed with some 1,000 passengers, many of them heading for vacations in Austria, Switzerland and West Germany.

The blast occurred about 100 yards from the end of Europe's longest double-rail tunnel and police speculated that the bomb had been timed to go off inside the tunnel to cause maximum panic.

Two groups of extremists — one anarchist, the other Neo-Fascist — are standing trial for the murder of 16 persons in the bombing of a Milan bank five years ago. Each group disclaims any connection with the Black Order.

But the Black Order previously took responsibility for the bomb blast that killed eight persons last May at a leftist rally in the north Italian town of Brescia. No arrests have been made in the Brescia bombing.

A 'Nation Of Snoopers'?

Would you believe that there are 60 agencies or offices within the federal government which devote at least part of their time and resources to snooping into the private affairs of citizens? It's apparently true. According to Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a Library of Congress survey shows that more than 60 units within the federal bureaucracy, ranging from the Agriculture Department to the Smithsonian Institution, are involved in police, investigative or intelligence work.

The invasion of privacy is thus well established across a broad front, broader even than most people who are concerned about such things would imagine.

Percy, a possible presidential candidate, believes "there is an immediate, urgent need for a comprehensive accounting of the U.S. funds and government personnel devoted to police, investigative and intelligence work. Congress is simply not performing the oversight functions our citizens expect of us." The Illinois Republican has asked the U.S. comptroller general to report to the Senate Government Relations Committee as quickly as possible how many people are in such work, what their missions are and how much the government pays for their services. He said the committee, of which he is the ranking Republican, would conduct hearings aimed at getting rid of "excessive and unnecessary" police and intelligence efforts and setting up "adequate congressional control" over the remainder.

The task requested by Percy would be the first such comprehensive survey of the federal police and intelligence community ever conducted and reported to Congress.

It's an idea whose time has come, its arrival hastened by the abuses of power charged to various officials in the Nixon administration. As Percy said, "we find ourselves threatened by the spectre of a 'watchdog' government breeding a nation of snoopers."

Percy is not the only public figure to raise the issue. Ironically, President Nixon has listed invasion of privacy as one of the major concerns facing the nation, something that will have to be effectively dealt with. But even the President agrees that Congress is the proper body to tackle the problem.

Most Americans have been summed up, profiled and indexed — sometimes inaccurately, unfairly and unnecessarily — by a host of information addicts ranging from governments at every level to law enforcement agencies to schools to private business.

The tide has to be turned and Percy is to be commended for launching a crackdown on snooping at the federal level.

Taking The Long View

This has been an altogether weird summer. Early spot flooding and hail damage, per usual. Then no appreciable rain for much of the state during the growing period it's needed most. Between 15 and 20 100-plus days and now the record low nighttime temperatures. The weather and markets are making a liar out of Agriculture Secretary Butz. Farmers have had it better before.

Farmers in Nebraska as elsewhere, we imagine, are not panicking, as Butz suggests, but reacting with a realistic assessment of conditions, to use Gov. Exon's words. They are also probably wondering if the government acts as well as talks.

When times are grim, people look to the continuity of life to keep their faith constant. As surely as spring breaks the cold, hard Nebraska winter, moisture will break the drought. It's all a matter of time. There will always be farming as a way of life for people, although there may be changes in the methods of producing and marketing livestock and grain. And that is a matter of adjustment.

Farmers are well-armed for the silent war of nerves against nature and man-made conditions. They know there are no guarantees in their business. They are strong on waiting it out and adjusting.

There is no real panic here. Just contempt for cheap government propaganda, honest, albeit sorrowful, realization that this year may be a bad year and hope that next year will be better.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is myoma uteri? The doctor says that is my trouble and seemed quite concerned. I had been told a year ago that it was a small fibroid and nothing to worry about.—E.R.

Dear Doctor: I am 39 and have fibroid tumors. I would like an explanation of the advantages and disadvantages of having the tumors removed, or of having a hysterectomy instead. I now have one child and do not wish to have more. I understand that when hysterectomies are performed there is a chance the ovaries will develop cysts. — Mrs. M.H.G.

Myoma uteri is the technical term for a fibroid tumor, the sort that appears in the uterus with considerable frequency.

In most cases, when fibroid tumors are discovered, the woman is told not to worry, because in the majority of cases there just isn't anything to worry about. Very often these tumors remain as they are for years. Indeed, sometimes after menopause they recede in size.

The exception is that occasionally a fibroid tumor — myoma uteri, if you prefer that term — begins to enlarge, can cause discomfort, or bleeding, or other symptoms, and sometimes even becomes malignant.

If any of these symptoms occurs, that's time enough to get rid of the tumor. So in E.R.'s case I would take it for granted that her fibroid has begun to show some changes and the doctor judges the time has come to remove it.

To answer Mrs. G.: Sometimes a small fibroid can be removed from the wall of the uterus, yet leave the uterus itself in place. But this is not always possible. The size and location of the fibroid is one consideration. The fact that at times there may be several, or even quite a number of, fibroids is another.

In such cases it is much more satisfactory to resort to hysterectomy — that is, removal of the entire uterus.

The fact that Mrs. G. does not want any more children, and at 39 is approaching menopause and the end of child-bearing years, would indicate that hysterectomy would be preferable to trying to remove just the fibroid.

As to cysts of the ovaries following hysterectomy — well, it can happen, but it can happen without a hysterectomy, too. In other words, ovarian cysts are NOT something to be expected after a hysterectomy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For many years I have been plagued with the problem of skin cracking near the fingernails. This is annoying and painful. Can something be done about it? — S.L.M.

Most of us have had an occasional hangnail — and yes, it's annoying. But when the problem persists, it's time to do something about it.

The most frequent — but not the only — cause is that the cuticle may adhere to the nail as it emerges. As the nail grows, the cuticle (skin) is stretched, until the crack or tear occurs.

Best solution is also the simplest. When the skin has been softened (after a leisurely bath, or after soaking the fingers) gently push the cuticle back. You can get orangewood sticks at the drug store for this purpose. Try doing this regularly, say at least once a week, and see if that doesn't help.

Other possible causes may be irritation from polish remover or from whatever household chemicals you happen to use.

Inadequate protein in the diet can cause the cuticle to be thin and fragile, so attention to diet may also be a help to you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a girl, 16, and have a posture problem. I'm always humped-backed. Is there any way to help this? I often get a low backache. Can this be due to my condition? — A.H.

I'm sorry that I can't tell you what to do just from what you've written, but back pain can result from poor posture. The question is whether this is just a matter of not standing up the way you should, or whether there's some spinal problem which needs more than just effort. At 16, it's getting late — so see a doctor about this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How much sea water can I take per day? I have arthritis and would like to give it a try, but no directions came with it. — F.E.D.

Sea water as a "cure" for almost anything you can mention has had a lot of publicity but no evidence that it is any good.

Since it is merely brine, I dare say you could drink whatever amount you wanted, short of having the excess salt upset your stomach, or disturb your blood pressure, liver or kidneys.

I don't expect it to do a thing for your arthritis, but you should know how your health is in other respects before monkeying with the stuff.

By RICHARD L. WORSNOP
WASHINGTON — Few public figures in American life have been as revered or as reviled as Herbert Clark Hoover, 31st president of the United States, who was born 100 years ago on August 10, in West Branch, Iowa. He was a great engineer, a great humanitarian, and a great cabinet officer. But he also made a great mistake: He ran for president in 1928, and won.

Eight months after Hoover took office, the stock market crashed and the country slid into its worst economic depression. His critics claimed he failed to perceive the severity of the crisis and to take prompt or remedial action.

In contrast to his successor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Hoover believed that aid to the hungry and deserving should come from local governments or the states and counties, not from the federal government. "Prosperity cannot be restored by raids upon the public treasury," he declared.

Swept into office by a landslide, Hoover was swept out by one of even greater magnitude. In 1928 he had carried 40 states; in 1932 he carried six. The shantytowns in which thousands of jobless persons lived were by then called "Hoovervilles." To millions of Americans, Hoover and Depression were synonymous.

When presidents retire, even unpopular ones, criticism of them generally fades away. Not so in Hoover's case. For the next 20 years, Democratic presidential nominees often seemed to be campaigning as vigorously against Hoover as against their actual Republican opponents.

In retirement, Hoover reacted stoically to the vituperation heaped upon him. "I knew from the bitter experience of all public men from George Washington down that democracies are fickle and heartless," he said. "When the ultimate bump came, I was well fortified to accept it philosophically and, in fact, to welcome it, for democracy is a harsh employer."

Luckily for Hoover, fickleness can cut both ways. Harry S. Truman helped to restore the ex-President's reputation by appointing him chairman of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch. This group, which soon became known as the Hoover Commission, issued several reports on ways of streamlining and creating economies in the administrative structure of the government. Many of the commission's recommendations were enacted into law.

By the time Hoover reached age 75, in 1949, the animosities of Depression days had largely evaporated. News commentators called attention to his early achievements in engineering and as administrator of food relief programs during and after World War I.

"Honesty compels the admission that the American people humiliated their ex-President," wrote the Miami Herald in an editorial. "Hoover accepted the situation with dignity. He was confident that time would vindicate him. What is particularly gratifying on his 75th birthday is that he has lived to see the vindication."

Hoover lived to celebrate 15 more birthday anniversaries before his death on Oct. 20, 1964. Although historians rate him no better than an "average" President, his stature as one of America's most distinguished public servants seems secure.

Decline today could be as catastrophic as it was in 1929.

By VIRGINIA PAYETTE

NEW YORK — Wall Streeters, who have plenty of time on their hands since nobody's buying stocks these days, keep busy telling us not to worry, that the big crash of 1929 could never happen again.

That's what THEY say. A lot of other folks think it already has.

There are even a few realists around who shrug off the fancy words ("recession" . . . "no-growth period" . . . "final correctional phase" . . . "stagflation" . . . "bear market") and come right out with the biggie: "Depression." With a capital D.

If the past five years haven't been a crash, they sure add up to a fast slide to rock bottom. In fact, in the current Business Week, stock expert Raymond F. DeVoe looks the bear in the eye and finds it twice as big as it was in 1929.

Back there, the "decline" lasted less than three years, from September, 1929, to July, 1932. This one has dragged on from December, 1968.

In the big crash, the market dropped 89.2% and most of the big plungers dropped with it (some off the ledges of tall buildings). This time, according to DeVoe, The New York Stock Exchange has dropped 68.8 per cent and the American Stock Exchange is off 85.9 per cent.

But that's not counting inflation. Figure that in and today's bad news adds up to 79.2% drop for the NYSE and 90.5% for Amex. By the same comparison, 1929's disaster was 86.5%.

Not only that, DeVoe even pinpoints the time of our own crash. It happened around last Thanksgiving when, in 26 trading days, the market went down 199 points.

That, he says, was more than the initial break in 1929 and "one of the sharpest sell-offs of all time."

In the current collapse, the consumer price index is up a budget-busting 50% since 1968 and still climbing. Inflation is hovering around 14% . . . and wages aren't keeping up with prices.

If it goes on like this, by 1980 we'll have to be earning twice as much as we are now, just to break even.

And not too many expect to meet the price of beans and rice by making a killing in the market. From that happy day on Jan. 11, 1973, when the Dow-Jones average hit the legendary 1,000 for the first time in history, investors have lost close to $450 billion ($300 billion on the Big Board alone). The fact that almost every week there's news that another big brokerage house is in trouble doesn't build up their confidence either.

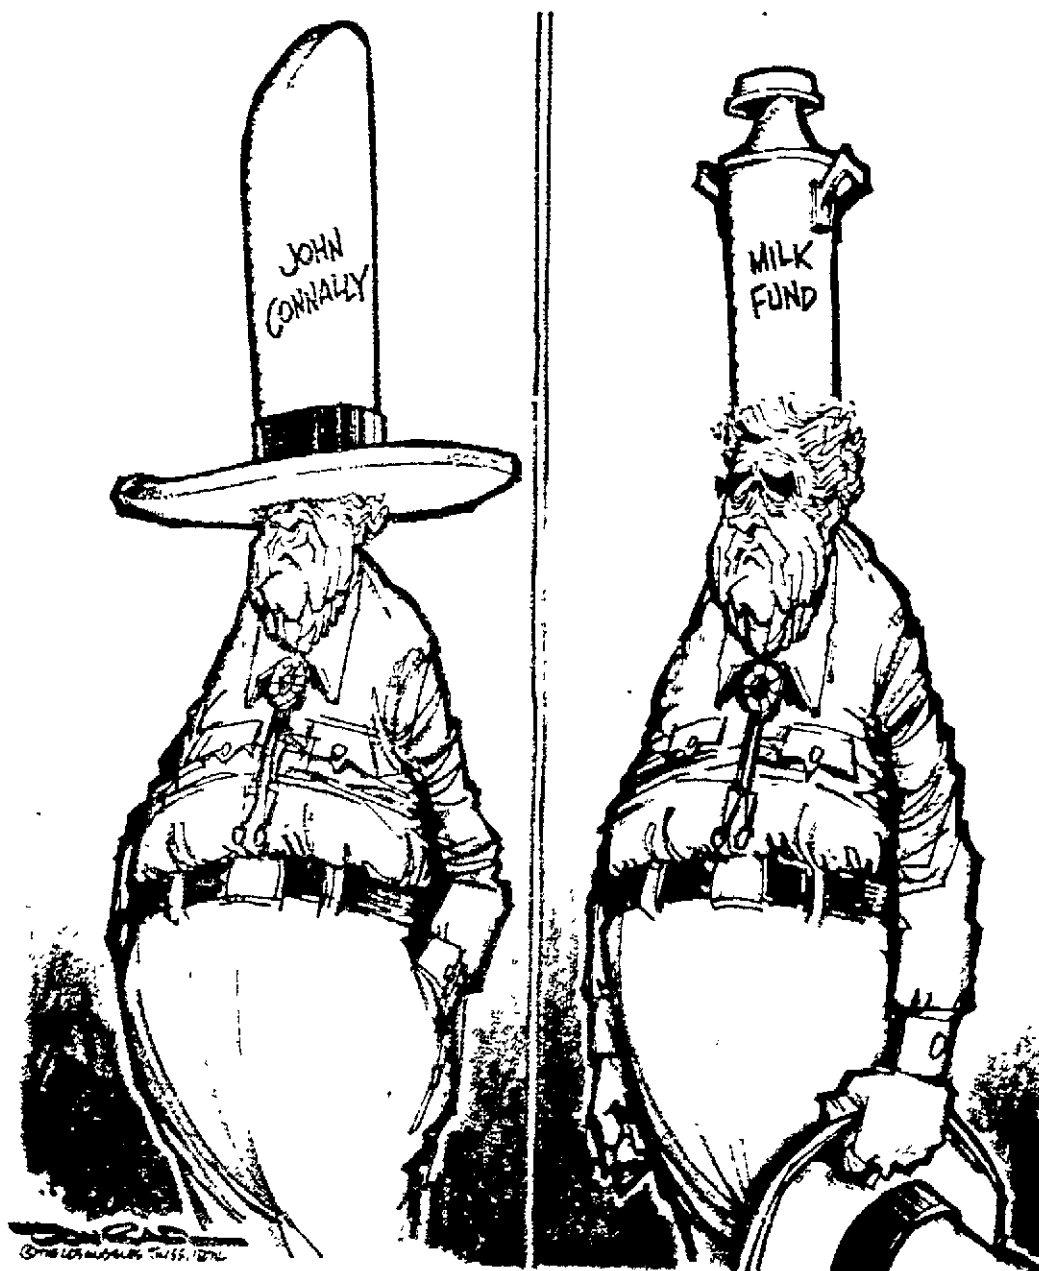

Pan American airlines would have to go up 1,233 per cent . . . Consolidated Edison utility, 704 per cent . . . Chrysler, 393 per cent . . . and poor old Penn Central, 5,233 per cent, to get back to their all-time highs.

And yet, with statistics like this lying around, there are still folks in Washington who keep telling us another 1929-type crash is "unthinkable."

Ordeal of the presidency likely to be spared John Connally

By BOB CONSIDINE
NEW YORK — At a posh party in Dallas two years ago, the guests of honor were handsome John Connally and his beautiful wife. There was no question among the other guests about where Big John was heading. Up.

"But he doesn't really want the presidency," a close friend and admirer told me. "Neither he nor she wants to spend eight long years in Washington."

Recent events indicate that he may be spared that ordeal.

Some weeks back, President Richard Nixon called in Vice President Gerald Ford — who was getting alarmingly close to telling the President what he was doing wrong — and said, in effect, "Jerry, baby, you've been working too hard at your job. You're wearing yourself out. Take a breather. Cut down on your speaking schedule. Get some rest."

Never has advice been so assiduously followed. Ford seems to have gone immediately to the nearest golf course and hasn't been heard from since. While his leader was going through the meat grinder of the House Judiciary Committee, and agonizing over whether to ask that his case be allowed to leapfrog the full House and go directly to the Senate, good old Jerry, obedient to the end, was playing with one of Nixon's most articulate opponents, House Majority Leader Tip O'Neill in the pre-am tournaments that preceded the opening of the Pleasant Valley Classic, Sutton, Mass.

Must be a great comfort to the President that at least one member of his official family does what he's told to do.

A 'Nation Of Snoopers'?

Would you believe that there are 60 agencies or offices within the federal government which devote at least part of their time and resources to snooping into the private affairs of citizens? It's apparently true. According to Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a Library of Congress survey shows that more than 60 units within the federal bureaucracy, ranging from the Agriculture Department to the Smithsonian Institution, are involved in police, investigative or intelligence work.

The invasion of privacy is thus well established across a broad front, broader even than most people who are concerned about such things would imagine.

Percy, a possible presidential candidate, believes "there is an immediate, urgent need for a comprehensive accounting of the U.S. funds and government personnel devoted to police, investigative and intelligence work. Congress is simply not performing the oversight functions our citizens expect of us." The Illinois Republican has asked the U.S. comptroller general to report to the Senate Government Relations Committee as quickly as possible how many people are in such work, what their missions are and how much the government pays for their services. He said the committee, of which he is the ranking Republican, would conduct hearings aimed at getting rid of "excessive and unnecessary" police and intelligence efforts and setting up "adequate congressional control" over the remainder.

The task requested by Percy would be the first such comprehensive survey of the federal police and intelligence community ever conducted and reported to Congress.

It's an idea whose time has come, its arrival hastened by the abuses of power charged to various officials in the Nixon administration. As Percy said, "we find ourselves threatened by the spectre of a 'watchdog' government breeding a nation of snoopers."

Percy is not the only public figure to raise the issue. Ironically, President Nixon has listed invasion of privacy as one of the major concerns facing the nation, something that will have to be effectively dealt with. But even the President agrees that Congress is the proper body to tackle the problem.

Most Americans have been summed up, profiled and indexed — sometimes inaccurately, unfairly and unnecessarily — by a host of information addicts ranging from governments at every level to law enforcement agencies to schools to private business.

The tide has to be turned and Percy is to be commended for launching a crackdown on snooping at the federal level.

Taking The Long View

This has been an altogether weird summer. Early spot flooding and hail damage, per usual. Then no appreciable rain for much of the state during the growing period it's needed most. Between 15 and 20 100-plus days and now the record low nighttime temperatures. The weather and markets are making a liar out of Agriculture Secretary Butz. Farmers have had it better before.

Farmers in Nebraska as elsewhere, we imagine, are not panicking, as Butz suggests, but reacting with a realistic assessment of conditions, to use Gov. Exon's words. They are also probably wondering if the government acts as well as talks.

When times are grim, people look to the continuity of life to keep their faith constant. As surely as spring breaks the cold, hard Nebraska winter, moisture will break the drought. It's all a matter of time. There will always be farming as a way of life for people, although there may be changes in the methods of producing and marketing livestock and grain. And that is a matter of adjustment.

Farmers are well-armed for the silent war of nerves against nature and man-made conditions. They know there are no guarantees in their business. They are strong on waiting it out and adjusting.

There is no real panic here. Just contempt for cheap government propaganda, honest, albeit sorrowful, realization that this year may be a bad year and hope that next year will be better.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is myoma uteri? The doctor says that is my trouble and seemed quite concerned. I had been told a year ago that it was a small fibroid and nothing to worry about.—E.R.

Dear Doctor: I am 39 and have fibroid tumors. I would like an explanation of the advantages and disadvantages of having the tumors removed, or of having a hysterectomy instead. I now have one child and do not wish to have more. I understand that when hysterectomies are performed there is a chance the ovaries will develop cysts. — Mrs. M.H.G.

Myoma uteri is the technical term for a fibroid tumor, the sort that appears in the uterus with considerable frequency.

In most cases, when fibroid tumors are discovered, the woman is told not to worry, because in the majority of cases there just isn't anything to worry about. Very often these tumors remain as they are for years. Indeed, sometimes after menopause they recede in size.

The exception is that occasionally a fibroid tumor — myoma uteri, if you prefer that term — begins to enlarge, can cause discomfort, or bleeding, or other symptoms, and sometimes even becomes malignant.

If any of these symptoms occurs, that's time enough to get rid of the tumor. So in E.R.'s case I would take it for granted that her fibroid has begun to show some changes and the doctor judges the time has come to remove it.

To answer Mrs. G.: Sometimes a small fibroid can be removed from the wall of the uterus, yet leave the uterus itself in place. But this is not always possible. The size and location of the fibroid is one consideration. The fact that at times there may be several, or even quite a number of, fibroids is another.

In such cases it is much more satisfactory to resort to hysterectomy — that is, removal of the entire uterus.

The fact that Mrs. G. does not want any more children, and at 39 is approaching menopause and the end of child-bearing years, would indicate that hysterectomy would be preferable to trying to remove just the fibroid.

As to cysts of the ovaries following hysterectomy — well, it can happen, but it can happen without a hysterectomy, too. In other words, ovarian cysts are NOT something to be expected after a hysterectomy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For many years I have been plagued with the problem of skin cracking near the fingernails. This is annoying and painful. Can something be done about it? — S.L.M.

Most of us have had an occasional hangnail — and yes, it's annoying. But when the problem persists, it's time to do something about it.

The most frequent — but not the only — cause is that the cuticle may adhere to the nail as it emerges. As the nail grows, the cuticle (skin) is stretched, until the crack or tear occurs.

Best solution is also the simplest. When the skin has been softened (after a leisurely bath, or after soaking the fingers) gently push the cuticle back. You can get orangewood sticks at the drug store for this purpose. Try doing this regularly, say at least once a week, and see if that doesn't help.

Other possible causes may be irritation from polish remover or from whatever household chemicals you happen to use.

Inadequate protein in the diet can cause the cuticle to be thin and fragile, so attention to diet may also be a help to you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a girl, 16, and have a posture problem. I'm always hunched. Is there any way to help this? I often get a low backache. Can this be due to my condition? — A.H.

I'm sorry that I can't tell you what to do just from what you've written, but back pain can result from poor posture. The question is whether this is just a matter of not standing the way you should, or whether there's some spinal problem which needs more than just effort. At 16, it's getting late — so see a doctor about this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How much sea water can I take per day? I have arthritis and would like to give it a try, but no directions came with it. — F.E.D.

Sea water as a "cure" for almost anything you can mention has had a lot of publicity but no evidence that it is any good.

Since it is merely brine, I dare say you could drink whatever amount you wanted, short of having the excess salt upset your stomach, or disturb your blood pressure, liver or kidneys.

I don't expect it to do a thing for your arthritis, but you should know how your health is in other respects before monkeying with the stuff.

By RICHARD L. WORSNOP
WASHINGTON — Few public figures in American life have been as revered or as reviled as Herbert Clark Hoover, 31st president of the United States, who was born 100 years ago on August 10, in West Branch, Iowa. He was a great engineer, a great humanitarian, and a great cabinet officer. But he also made a great mistake: He ran for president in 1928, and won.

Eight months after Hoover took office, the stock market crashed and the country slid into its worst economic depression. His critics claimed he failed to perceive the severity of the crisis and to take prompt or remedial action.

In contrast to his successor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Hoover believed that aid to the hungry and deserving should come from local governments or the states and counties, not from the federal government. "Prosperity cannot be restored by raids upon the public treasury," he declared.

Swept into office by a landslide, Hoover was swept out by one of even greater magnitude. In 1928 he had carried 40 states; in 1932 he carried six. The shantytowns in which thousands of jobless persons lived were by then called "Hoovervilles." To millions of Americans, Hoover and Depression were synonymous.

When presidents retire, even unpopular ones, criticism of them generally fades away. Not so in Hoover's case. For the next 20 years, Democratic presidential nominees often seemed to be campaigning as vigorously against Hoover as against their actual Republican opponents.

In retirement, Hoover reacted stoically to the vituperation heaped upon him. "I knew from the bitter experience of all public men from George Washington down that democracies are fickle and heartless," he said. "When the ultimate bump came, I was well fortified to accept it philosophically and, in fact, to welcome it, for democracy is a harsh employer."

Luckily for Hoover, fickleness can cut both ways. Harry S. Truman helped to restore the ex-President's reputation by appointing him chairman of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch. This group, which soon became known as the Hoover Commission, issued several reports on ways of streamlining and creating economies in the administrative structure of the government. Many of the commission's recommendations were enacted into law.

By the time Hoover reached age 75, in 1949, the animosities of Depression days had largely evaporated. News commentators called attention to his early achievements in engineering and as administrator of food relief programs during and after World War I.

"Honesty compels the admission that the American people humiliated their ex-President," wrote the Miami Herald in an editorial. "Hoover accepted the situation with dignity. He was confident that time would vindicate him. What is particularly gratifying on his 75th birthday is that he has lived to see the vindication."

Hoover lived to celebrate 15 more birthday anniversaries before his death on Oct. 20, 1964. Although historians rate him no better than an "average" President, his stature as one of America's most distinguished public servants seems secure.

Beatrice Bridge Closing Draws Flood Of Protest

Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Beatrice — A scheduled closing of the Court St. bridge for a four-month repair project drew a flood of protest before the City Council Monday night. Approximately 40 persons, many of them representing the 27 businesses on the west side of town, urged a delay in construction to permit the investigating of a possible temporary crossing. Re-decking of the bridge, which serves U.S. 136 traffic and links the town together, is scheduled to begin next Monday.

Critical Of State
Several councilmen were critical of the State Department of Roads for failing to notify city officials of the closing until approximately three weeks ago. It was noted that concrete deterioration was discovered last winter and that a contract with Beatrice Concrete Co. was let this spring.

District Engineer F. L. Divis acknowledged that the city should have been formally advised. However, he said the bridge decking is in such bad condition that rebuilding is "absolutely necessary."

Since the work would take several weeks, he said the delay now would probably mean postponement beyond winter. "The bridge is so bad that a truck could fall through, maybe tomorrow or next week," he added.

Divis agreed to contact State Engineer Thomas Doyle as soon as possible about a delay. However, he noted that the State Highway Commission has urged prompt action on the repairs.

Injunction Opposed
Mayor Bob Sargent estimated that a temporary 100-foot bridge would cost at least $80,000 and would require 12 weeks to construct. But he said he would not favor an injunction against the repairs as has been proposed by some objectors.

Several councilmen echoed the remarks of Doug Probst that "the state is creating the problem and the state should be trying to solve it."

Dan Umphenour, a west-side grocer, said closing the bridge would be an "economic disaster" for many of the firms in that part of town. He was backed by several other spokesmen, who also cited hardships for school buses and medical patients at a clinic.

On another matter, the council agreed to the settlement of a controversial $42,782 bill for engineering services on a sanitary sewer study. Several councilmen had questioned the amount since the original estimate on the open-end contract was $20,000.

Harold Hoskins of Lincoln, representing Hoskins-Western-Sonderegger, agreed to a $32,000 amount now, the balance subject to receipt of federal funding on the long-range project. He acknowledged "some breakdown in communications," but said a letter was sent to the Board of Public Works revising the original estimates to $32,000.

"Our rates are not out of line and we feel we earned our money," said Hoskins. He added that while a $2 million sewage treatment plant is ultimately involved, the city will have to assume only 12 1/2% of the cost.

Necas Named Road Engineer

Andy Necas Jr., will become acting district highway engineer in Grand Island to replace Jack Reed, whose resignation becomes effective Aug. 23, according to state roads director Tom Doyle.

The department said Necas, who has been construction engineer in Grand Island since 1966, may eventually be permanently assigned as district engineer in Grand Island.

Marshalltown (UPI) — Republican U.S. Senate candidate Dave Stanley announced he has signed the code of fair campaign practices sponsored by the Fair Campaign Practices Committee.

Vice President Ford

Ford Agrees With Vets On Amnesty

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford condemned any "unconditional blanket amnesty" for Vietnam deserters or draft evaders Monday — drawing a roar of applause from an audience of veterans.

"Unconditional blanket amnesty to anyone who illegally evaded or fled military service is wrong," he told the Disabled American Veterans national convention.

Ford also made a strong plea for maintaining military power. He said efforts will be made in the House this week to cut an $83.7 billion defense appropriations bill with a "meat ax" approach that would whack off 5 to 10 per cent.

The same forces also intend to try to reduce U.S. forces in Europe, which could undermine the nation's clout in foreign affairs, he said.

"I don't impugn their motives; I challenge their judgment," he said.

Waverly Pool Faces Cool Reception

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Waverly — The new swimming pool here may get a chilly reception when it's finally completed.

Harlan Weingart of the Weingart Construction Co. of Waverly, told the City Council Monday that the pool probably won't be ready for swimmers until sometime in November.

Original plans called for completion of the 4,200-square-foot pool this month.

Later, in an interview, Weingart said he blames the delay on the weather, trouble getting supplies and members of the town board.

"They couldn't make up their minds," he explained. "Originally they wanted it one place, then they decided to move it 50 feet and then they decided not to."

He said he had planned to start digging last October. But because of the mixup, he didn't begin construction until this spring.

"They probably wouldn't have opened it until next year anyway," he said.

In other business, the council discussed rezoning about four acres of farmland on the east edge of the city.

The land, formerly owned by Charles Fahleson, has been sold to Roper & Sons Mortuary of Lincoln.

According to Charles Roper, the firm plans to build a chapel there "possibly within the next few years."

"It's not economically feasible now, however," Roper said.

The council also discussed removing two members of the Waverly Planning Commission from office for not attending the monthly meetings.

Bill Malone, Planning Commission chairman, said Ray Root and Rick Carlson have only attended one or two meetings since the beginning of the year. Lloyd Bevans, city attorney and city clerk, suggested the commission warn the delinquent members, "then if they don't come, amend your bylaws so that you can kick them off and find somebody who will."

HAVE YOU WRITTEN A BOOK?

The field editor of a well-known New York subsidy publishing firm will be in Lincoln in late September. He will be interviewing local authors in a quest for finished manuscripts suitable for book publication. All subjects will be considered, including fiction and non-fiction, poetry, juveniles, religious books, etc.

If you have completed a book-length manuscript (or nearly so) on any subject, and would like a professional appraisal (without cost or obligation), please write immediately describing your work and stating which part of the day (a.m. or p.m.) you would prefer for an appointment. Please mention your phone number. You will promptly receive a confirmation for a definite time and place.

Authors with completed manuscripts unable to appear may send them directly to us for a free reading and evaluation. We will also be glad to hear from those whose literary works are still in progress. Please address:

How to win the fuel duel without choosing sides.

Natural gas is piped directly from the wellhead to your home.

And because it

doesn't take much energy to move gas through a pipeline, natural gas comes into your home with 93% of its available energy. That's why gas is the best fuel for the big jobs such as heating your home, cooking your food, providing plenty of hot water, and drying your clothes. Natural gas appliances use less energy and cost less to use than comparable electric appliances operating on fossil fueled power.

Most electricity is generated by burning coal, oil, or natural gas.

These fossil fuels

lose a great percentage of their available energy in the generation and distribution of electricity. As a result, only 28% of the energy found in those natural resources is delivered to your home as usable energy. But there are many jobs around your house that only electricity can do. For lighting and small appliances, it's the most efficient way to go.

Let natural gas and electricity work side by side in your home. But, use natural gas for the big jobs. Be sure to replace your old, less efficient appliances with modern, new gas appliances. You can't lose with efficiency and economy on your side.

Beatrice Bridge Closing Draws Flood Of Protest

Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Beatrice — A scheduled closing of the Court St. bridge for a four-month repair project drew a flood of protest before the City Council Monday night.

Approximately 40 persons, many of them representing the 27 businesses on the west side of town, urged a delay in construction to permit the investigating of a possible temporary crossing. Re-decking of the bridge, which serves U.S. 136 traffic and links the town together, is scheduled to begin next Monday.

Several councilmen were critical of the State Department of Roads for failing to notify city officials of the closing until approximately three weeks ago. It was noted that concrete deterioration was discovered last winter and that a contract with Beatrice Concrete Co. was let this spring.

District Engineer F. L. Davis acknowledged that the city should have been formally advised. However, he said the bridge decking is in such bad condition that rebuilding is "absolutely necessary."

Since the work would take several weeks, he said the delay now would probably mean postponement beyond winter. "The bridge is so bad that a truck could fall through, maybe tomorrow or next week," he added.

Divis agreed to contact State Engineer Thomas Doyle as soon as possible about a delay. However, he noted that the State Highway Commission has urged prompt action on the repairs.

Injunction Opposed
Mayor Bob Sargent estimated that a temporary 100-foot bridge would cost at least $80,000 and would require 12 weeks to construct. But he said he would not favor an injunction against the repairs as has been proposed by some objectors.

Several councilmen echoed the remarks of Doug Probst that "the state is creating the problem and the state should be trying to solve it."

Dan Umphenour, a west-side grocer, said closing the bridge would be an "economic disaster" for many of the firms in that part of town. He was backed by several other spokesmen, who also cited hardships for school buses and medical patients at a clinic.

On another matter, the council agreed to the settlement of a controversial $42,782 bill for engineering services on a sanitary sewer study. Several councilmen had questioned the amount since the original estimate on the open-end contract was $20,000.

Harold Hoskins of Lincoln, representing Hoskins-Western-Sonderregger, agreed to a $32,000 amount now, the balance subject to receipt of federal funding on the long-range project. He acknowledged "some breakdown in communications," but said a letter was sent to the Board of Public Works revising the original estimates to $32,000. "Our rates are not out of line and we feel we earned our money," said Hoskins. He added that while a $2 million sewage treatment plant is ultimately involved, the city will have to assume only 12 1/2% of the cost.

Necas Named Road Engineer

Andy Necas Jr., will become acting district highway engineer in Grand Island to replace Jack Reed, whose resignation becomes effective Aug. 23, according to state roads director Tom Doyle.

The department said Necas, who has been construction engineer in Grand Island since 1966, may eventually be permanently assigned as district engineer in Grand Island.

Ford Agrees With Vets On Amnesty

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford condemned any "unconditional blanket amnesty" for Vietnam deserters or draft evaders Monday — drawing a roar of applause from an audience of veterans.

"Unconditional blanket amnesty to anyone who illegally evaded or fled military service is wrong," he told the Disabled American Veterans national convention.

Ford also made a strong plea for maintaining military power. He said efforts will be made in the House this week to cut an $83.7 billion defense appropriations bill with a "meat ax" approach that would whack off 5 to 10 per cent.

The same forces also intend to try to reduce U.S. forces in Europe, which could undermine the nation's clout in foreign affairs, he said.

"I don't impugn their motives; I challenge their judgment," he said.

Waverly Pool Faces Cool Reception

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Waverly — The new swimming pool here may get a chilly reception when it's finally completed.

Harlan Weingart of the Weingart Construction Co. of Waverly, told the City Council Monday that the pool probably won't be ready for swimmers until sometime in November.

Original plans called for completion of the 4,200-square-foot pool this month.

Later, in an interview, Weingart said he blames the delay on the weather, trouble getting supplies and members of the town board.

Meany Says Unions Would Support Ford

CHICAGO (AP) — George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, predicted on Monday that trade unions would support Vice President Gerald Ford if he ascends to the presidency because of President Nixon's removal or resignation from office.

Nixon's preoccupation with House impeachment proceedings and his defense before a possible Senate trial are aggravating a bad economy, Meany said, and it would be better for the nation if Nixon resigned rather than waited for impeachment to run its course.

"I don't think, if the President resigns, it would be a shock to the nation," he said at a news conference. He said resignation may be a quicker road to curing the ills of inflation than impeachment because of what he described as a lack of confidence and a lack of integrity in the President.

Asked if labor could get along with Ford, generally regarded as a conservative in thinking, Meany replied: "A conservative with integrity is far better than what we have today in the White House ... All I want to see is the President go away."

Meany did describe Ford's performance in defending Nixon policies and conduct as "horrible," but added, "I'm

"They couldn't make up their minds," he explained. "Originally they wanted it one place, then they decided to move it 50 feet and then they decided not to."

He said he had planned to start digging last October. But because of the mixup, he didn't begin construction until this spring.

"They probably wouldn't have opened it until next year anyway," he said.

In other business, the council discussed rezoning about four acres of farmland on the east edge of the city.

The land, formerly owned by Charles Fahleson, has been sold to Roper & Sons Mortuary of Lincoln.

According to Charles Roper, the firm plans to build a chapel there "possibly within the next few years."

"It's not economically feasible now, however," Roper said.

The council also discussed removing two members of the Waverly Planning Commission from office for not attending the monthly meetings.

Bill Malone, Planning Commission chairman, said Ray Root and Rick Carlson have only attended one or two meetings since the beginning of the year. Lloyd Bevans, city attorney and city clerk, suggested the commission warn the delinquent members, "then if they don't come, amend your bylaws so that you can kick them off and find somebody who will."

How to win the fuel duel without choosing sides.

Natural gas is piped directly from the wellhead to your home.

And because it

doesn't take much energy to move gas through a pipeline, natural gas comes into your home with 93% of its available energy. That's why gas is the best fuel for the big jobs such as heating your home, cooking your food, providing plenty of hot water, and drying your clothes. Natural gas appliances use less energy and cost less to use than comparable electric appliances operating on fossil fueled power.

Most electricity is generated by burning coal, oil, or natural gas.

These fossil fuels

lose a great percentage of their available energy in the generation and distribution of electricity. As a result, only 28% of the energy found in those natural resources is delivered to your home as usable energy. But there are many jobs around your house that only electricity can do. For lighting and small appliances, it's the most efficient way to go.

Let natural gas and electricity work side by side in your home. But, use natural gas for the big jobs. Be sure to replace your old, less efficient appliances with modern, new gas appliances. You can't lose with efficiency and economy on your side.

Kreuscher: Outlook Grave For Farmers

By The Associated Press
State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher said Monday that Nebraska farmers need rain, and "they need it soon if they are to salvage the year."

Citing last week's figures, which estimated the state's crop and livestock losses so far at more than $2.3 billion, Kreuscher said that if rain does not fall this month, farmers will start the fall season on a serious note.

"If that happens," Kreuscher said, "Nebraska farmers will really be in bad shape."

Kreuscher agreed that farmers could be worse off, but said "the roof will really cave in if this is the beginning of a drought cycle."

Kreuscher, like Gov. J. James Exon, also reacted strongly to last week's statements by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz. Butz predicted that this would be the second best year on record for the nation's farmers.

Kreuscher suggests that Butz "go out and talk to the farmers."

"Butz is trying to stall for time for the situation to get better. He may be playing a very serious game."

Kreuscher also called on the federal government to start looking at a reserve program, and said the administration is beginning to take a look at such a program.

According to Kreuscher, it would be foolhardy not to have such a program.

Kreuscher said he felt that such a program can be isolated from the market, and that with proper management, it would not have to be used as pressure against the farmer.

"We might regret the day we gave too much grain away at too cheap a price because we were poor businessmen," Kreuscher added.

Platte County Loses Estimated $37 Million

Columbus (UPI) — Figures released by the Platte County Emergency Board show crop losses from the drought at more than $37.2 million dollars.

Board chairman Dick James of the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the estimate didn't include livestock feeder losses because of the drought and sagging market prices. He said those losses also would reach into the "millions of dollars."

The latest ASCS statewide projection shows a total $2.23 billion in losses to both farmers and cattle feeders.

Buffalo Asks Exon To Rule Disaster Area

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP)—The Buffalo County Board of Supervisors Monday adopted a resolution asking Gov. J. James Exon to declare the county a disaster area because of crop losses due to drought.

Officials here estimate that from 10-15 per cent loss of the county's irrigated crops are lost, and that at least 50 per cent of dryland corn crop is lost.

Exact figures were not available on the milo and alfalfa crop losses, but both are thought to hover near the 50 per cent mark.

The dollar-estimate on the damage is expected to be near $9 million.

She Traded Her Dustmop For A Scalpel

By JON ZIOMEK

Chicago — "If things work out, maybe I'll go back to school sometime," Rita Pucci used to think after she had gotten married and started raising two children.

The thought seemed deceptively uninspired because Mrs. Pucci is now a doctor at 30, just beginning her residency in general surgery at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

She is one of few such women. Female surgeons are rare, female general surgeons even rarer — there are barely half a dozen women in general surgery in the Chicago area, according to Dr. Clara Bruce at the American Medical Women's Assn.

Most women doctors go into other areas of practice such as pediatrics, and most of those who do enter surgery specialize in areas like obstetrics and gynecology.

Women have traditionally been accepted in such specified areas. But surgeons are powerful people in hospitals. And it has been suggested that male surgeons generally may be unwilling to share their status with women, who are such a minority in the field.

"I think more and more women are going into surgery," Dr. Pucci said during an interview.

"I'm not going into surgery just because there are so few women in surgery and I think it's time for more," she said. "I'm going into surgery because I like it."

She conceded that in medical school, when she brought up the possibility of becoming a surgeon, often somebody tried to talk her out of it. "It's a very long program, a hard program, what about your family?" male faculty members would say.

"People aren't as open-minded as I'd like them to be. I expect to have problems," Dr. Pucci said.

"But I don't want to overemphasize the difficulty. There weren't any major obstacles. I just really liked surgery. It's exciting and dynamic and the patient-physician relationship is great."

Other female surgeons said they'd met little discrimination themselves but conceded the sensitivity of their position:

"Surgery has been thought of traditionally as a man's field," offered Dr. Augusta Webster, chairman of obstetrics at Cook County Hospital.

"I think the woman who sought a career in surgery didn't always get what she wanted. Perhaps," Dr. Webster indicated hesitantly, "women have had to try harder than men because they are conspicuous by their scarcity. But I was very fortunate."

Dr. Colette Jeantet, an ear surgeon at Michael Reese Hospital, said, "There are remarks sometimes — 'Why do you want to compete with men?'—I've never thought of myself as competing. I like living things and people, and I took surgery because I like to work with my hands."

"Surgical residents work terribly hard," said Dr. Olga Jonasson, director of the Organ Transplant Center at the University of Illinois Hospital. "It's very hard work, many, many hours in the hospital. Many women who are married or have social commitments just can't do it."

But she noted that she herself has had "very little difficulty. I've been fortunate. I don't think we have problems if we conduct ourselves in a confident and competent manner."

In the bustle of the cafeteria, she told how she married her husband, Joe, an insurance agent, not long after finishing high school and settled into the role of housewife.

"I was tired of formal education" after four years in a Catholic all-girl high school, she said, although the thought had crossed her mind during that period that she might like to be a doctor. "Never a nurse," she noted. "A doctor."

"But I was bored staying at home," she said.

A person with apparently greater resources of energy than most, she tried flying lessons, scuba diving, horseback riding and modern jazz dancing before returning to college and blazing through her entire undergraduate program and medical school in 5½ years.

"All those other things were fun but it was time to do something else," she said about her decision to return to school.

One of six sisters, Dr. Pucci said her parents taught their children to "make a living for ourselves as an alternative to getting married and having someone else support you."

Her goal was occasionally forgotten doing her housewifely chores. But still it was her desire to go to medical school. "When Joe brought up school, I had been thinking about it," she said. "I wouldn't have gone back to college if I hadn't had a goal."

So she returned to college when her daughter was 2 and her son was 3 and began the studies that brought her to where she is now — starting the first of the five years of residency required of surgeons.

Her schooling included a summer working at a hospital in Kenya as part of a fellowship. She did all the minor surgery there. "I had mixed emotions," she said in describing the first time she operated — on a boy who had been gored by a bull. "I was excited, but I knew I could do it."

The summer in Africa meant being away from her family, but her husband was able to get time off work and he took the children to stay with Dr. Pucci part of the time.

"We're very close," she said. Her mother-in-law has been of great help in taking care of the children, who are now 7 and 8, she said. "And the hours are getting worse," she smiled ruefully — 11-hour days and frequently being on call at the hospital. So there'll be more baby-sitting.

"My kids were always very socially adjustable," she said, getting ready to go home and prepare the family dinner. "I've never worried about our family relationships at all."

"Everything just seemed to work out for us," she said with a quick smile. "And my kids are probably better off because I'm happy."

Nutrition Aide Says—

'I Think We Do A Lot Of Good'

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

On the job and off, Marcella (Marty) Allgood spends most of her time in the kitchen.

One of eight nutrition aides for Lancaster County, Mrs. Allgood spends 32 hours a week teaching others about nutrition.

And, when she's home, she practices what she preaches.

"Anything I go out and tell my families, I do here," said the enthusiastic Mrs. Allgood, dragging a huge box of dried milk out of her cupboard. From there, she expounded on the virtues of dried milk.

"One of my first lessons... when I get into a family is to get them used to using dry milk... About a year ago a family of four could save $140 a year on dry milk" as opposed to the carton variety, she observed.

Her families, numbering now about 55, come from primarily one-parent homes where good nutrition habits are not practiced.

Those families are referred to the Expanded Nutrition Program of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Extension Service by schools and ministers, social service workers and public health nurses, friends and neighbors.

"If the mother never was taught (good nutrition) how can we expect them to tell their kids?" asked Mrs. Allgood.

So, she makes regular visits to each of her 55 homes — sometimes weekly, sometimes monthly, depending on the family's need for her service.

And her service comes in many forms. Most often it is counseling about food and what it can and cannot do for one's health; cost comparison shopping; doling out recommended recipes. She also performs such minor, yet helpful, tasks as assisting the "woman of the house" with rearranging the kitchen cupboards.

During the summer months, she spends much of her time at summer camps, encouraging youngsters to acquire good eating habits.

"Whatever we feel there is a need for, that's what we do," said Mrs. Allgood, adding that she even has helped homemakers can, bake bread and make noodles.

Whatever she and the homemaker choose to do during her visit, the nutrition aide always is helping her client learn about the "basic four and nutrients and what vitamins do for them."

When they are baking bread, they discuss breads; when canning vegetables, they talk about the need for those foods in the diet.

"The American public is not getting the vegetables, fruits and milk" it needs, yet it is eating "too much meat, protein, breads and cereals," Mrs. Allgood explained.

Admitting that many of her clients are skeptical when first approached, Mrs. Allgood recognizes the one essential element in establishing rapport with the homemakers: "I have to be their friend first... they have to trust us, be confident we know what their needs are."

A nutrition aide for more than three years, she is concerned that families learn to make wise use of their food dollar. "One homemaker complained that she didn't have the money to invest in fruits and vegetables. I eyed a package of potato chips and told her she could do without that," recalled Mrs. Allgood.

How did she get into the Expanded Nutrition Program?

"I was always in the restaurant business before and thought it would be interesting," said the former proprietress of a snack bar in the Anderson Building.

Testing the progress she has made, the nutrition aide conducts a food recall with her clients semi-annually.

Based upon the client's food consumption over the last three meals, it enables Mrs. Allgood to discover in which areas the clients are deficient. She plans an information-sharing session around the data garnered from the test — discussing the need for the neglected nutrients.

Approximately 150 Lancaster County families are helped on a regular basis through the program, according to Sharron Coplin, home economist for the nutrition aide programs in Lancaster and Gage Counties.

"I think we do a lot of good," Mrs. Allgood observed. "It's well worthwhile."

Based upon the client's food consumption over the last three meals, it enables Mrs. Allgood to discover in which areas the clients are deficient. She plans an information-sharing session around the data garnered from the test — discussing the need for the neglected nutrients.

Approximately 150 Lancaster County families are helped on a regular basis through the program, according to Sharron Coplin, home economist for the nutrition aide programs in Lancaster and Gage Counties.

"I think we do a lot of good," Mrs. Allgood observed. "It's well worthwhile."

BONNIE CASHIN

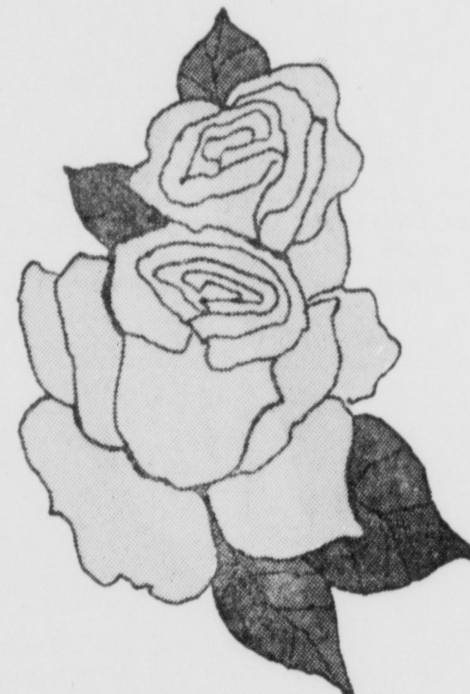

FALL TRUNK SHOW

Wednesday, Aug. 7 & Thursday, Aug. 8

Hovland-Swanson, Downtown

Trust Bonnie Cashin to go her own way. At a time when most clothes are getting bigger and bulkier, the new Bonnie Cashin Collection for Philip Sills is pared down to new, neaten proportions. Even Bonnie's famous bubble top has been deflated somewhat and is teamed with straight skirts. Bonnie also includes lots of new neaten suits with slim jackets, often belted, teamed with swingy, pleated skirts. See these great clothes that never become obsolete — they just become old friends.

Opening lead — queen of spades.

The value of a hand is often greatly affected by bids the other players make, and a good part of what is called bidding skill rests on how well one is able to re-evaluate a hand as the picture keeps changing.

Here is a dramatic example of the principle from the 1972 national team of four championship. Probably most players would pass with the West hand, but Mike Becker, son of this writer, opened the bidding as dealer with a club. North bid a diamond, which East (Andy Bernstein) passed.

A double by East would have been for takeout, in their partnership style, and Bernstein therefore felt constrained to pass.

Despite his anemic values, West decided to compete further when he doubled for takeout after South's pass of a diamond. East was happy to let the double stand, but South was not. He ran to one heart.

Sensing that the opponents were in deep trouble, West this time doubled for penalties and, after North had made an SOS redouble, also doubled one spade — which became the contract.

West's bidding was indeed remarkable. He had opened with absolutely minimum values and then proceeded to double every time it was his turn — just as though he had opened the bidding on a super hand.

Moreover, West made the effective opening lead of the queen of spades. Declarer ducked in dummy — quite naturally assuming that West had the Q-J and East the ace — whereupon West played the ace and another spade.

South eventually went down three for a loss of 500 points, though he could have saved a trick in the later play. West was exceptionally well rewarded for recognizing that even a minimum opening bid sometimes changes its complexion completely and becomes a powerhouse.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I've been struggling with this problem for a year and can't seem to come up with a solution.

I am 27, reasonably attractive and divorced. When a girl is 21 and not yet married, she can say no to a fellow and use the excuse that she is saving herself for marriage. But when she's 27 and divorced, what can she say that will be acceptable?

If I say, "I don't believe in sex outside marriage," it sounds like I'm trying to rope myself another husband, which is not necessarily true.

How can I get around this? What I need is some clever saying that will get me off the hook without making me sound like a goody-goody.

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: What makes you think you have to either deliver, or come up with an excuse? Surely you have something other than sex to offer a man. Just say: "No," and don't feel that you have to justify it.

DEAR ABBY: The days when girls went to college to catch a husband are a thing of the past. If girls don't get an education so they can support themselves they will end up on welfare.

The no-fault divorces are telling a story loud and clear. Women are not going to be able to hook a man and live off him for the rest of their lives.

A relative of mine is now

What Makes You Think You Need An Excuse?

looking for work at the age of 67. For 15 years her ex-husband sent her $800 a month, and she spent every dime of it. Last month she was told there will be no more checks and now she is half out of her mind. She's never done any kind of work in her life. She's hopelessly helpless.

She wants to come and live with me. I told her no. At age 45, I went back to school for two years to prepare myself for the job I now have. I like being independent, and I don't want to give up my privacy, which is what I would have to do if I let her come and live with me. Do you blame me?

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I'd have to know more about the relationship between you and this relative. If she is someone who looked after you when you were helpless, it would make a difference.

DEAR ABBY: The girl I'm dating has been invited to her cousin's wedding. She received a formal invitation, and enclosed was a note which read: "I am sorry, but I must ask you please not to bring a guest as it will be too much. Thank you," and it was signed by the bride's mother.

My question: Isn't it customary for a girl who is dating someone special to be allowed to bring him? I had quite a long discussion with my girl friend. I told her that under the circumstances I didn't think she should attend the wedding either as I do not approve of her going without me as her escort.

I would like your opinion.

OBJECT

DEAR OBJECT: Objection overruled! You aren't officially engaged to her and should not expect to be included. You appear to be unduly possessive of a girl you are only "dating." And you are out of order to insist that she not attend her cousin's wedding because you were not made welcome. Case dismissed.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe this is none of my business but I'm worried about my 14-year-old granddaughter. She's a beautiful child and very mature for her age. That's the trouble, I'm afraid. She's growing up too fast for her own good.

She turned 14 last Christmas and her boyfriend (he is 21) gave her a suede coat trimmed with real fur. He also gave her suede boots and a purse to match. That's not all. He gave her a portable TV and stereo set with maybe two dozen albums, plus a ten-pound box of candy.

I don't think a girl that age should be allowed to accept such expensive presents from a man, do you? The girl's father (my son) wasn't too pleased, but the mother thought it was just wonderful, and she even bragged to all her friends about it.

I can't talk to my daughter-in-law because she thinks I'm an old fogey, but I'd like to know what you think about this. I'm so afraid that the child is headed for trouble. What can I do?

GRAM

DEAR GRAM: Nothing, unfortunately, since her mother thinks it's "wonderful." Let's hope your granddaughter doesn't have any rough sledding before she finds out there isn't any Santa Claus.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M AND K: When an argument develops into a physical fight, the one who lands the first blow has lost the argument.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclosed stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Farm Family's Living Costs Rose To $9,482

Farm families who kept track of their living costs spent $9,482 in 1973, an increase of 26% over the previous year, according to summaries from the 1973 AGRIFAX.

Much of the 1973 increase was due simply to a higher standard of living, according to Georgia Skinker, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension family economics and management specialist.

The average living expense for all families keeping records was $8,377, the AGRIFAX figures showed.

Food at 21%, insurance and medical each at 10% and clothes and personal expenses at 9% accounted for 50% of the living expenses.

Only 3% of the income was spent on recreation, 4% on education and another 4% on utilities.

Older children at home or in college, large families, and families with the wife employed outside the home have higher living costs.

Age Is Determined

The oldest record of cotton textiles dates back about 5,000 years. It was found in the Indus River valley, now part of Pakistan. Excavations in Peru have uncovered cotton cloth which is thought to be at least 4,500 years old.

Our Elders Are Entitled To More

By ROBERT PETERSON
QUESTION: — "I just returned from visiting an old uncle and his wife in County Cork in Ireland. They have a tiny three-room house, outdoor plumbing, a wood stove for heat, no car or television, and have never been more than 200 miles from home. Yet incredibly they seem absolutely content and expressed not a single complaint the three days we were there. Don't you agree lots of old people in the United States are spoiled always asking for more?"

ANSWER: — Not necessarily. Our elders are accustomed to more, and are entitled to more because we have richer natural resources and greater industrialization than Ireland. It's probably true many people are complainers without due cause. But it's human nature to want more than one has. If you spent more time with your uncle you'd probably find he's got quite a few complaints and unfilled wants, too.

QUESTION: — "My wife is obsessed about keeping her teeth. She refuses to eat any food with sugar, and the minute she finishes a meal runs for her toothbrush. Between meals I'll often see her massaging her gums with her finger — not a pretty sight. She's got good teeth for a woman of 72 but I tell her it's not worth the trouble. I've had dentures for years and don't mind them a bit."

ANSWER: — Dentures are okay, but the real thing is better. Give your wife credit for trying to hang onto what the Lord gave her. We all have obsessions that others find annoying, and if your spouse does nothing more irritating than fuss over her tusks you're way ahead of the game.

QUESTION: — "Isn't a man entitled to some affectionate companionship before leaving this planet? I was attracted to my wife by her looks but soon found after marrying her she was frigid and unresponsive. She says it's nothing personal — just her nature. In 30 years of marriage she's never called me an endearing name or shown the slightest interest in being kissed. She just doesn't like to be touched, or as she calls it 'pawed over.' She's a good woman and our two children turned out fine. But she prefers to be alone, talks little, and never goes on trips with me. I've met a wonderful warm-hearted widow I'd like to marry. I'm seeing her on the sly simply because I crave warmth and affection. I'd like to marry this woman. Don't you agree a divorce is justified — especially if I provide adequately for my wife?"

ANSWER: — Talk it over with your wife. If she's as unresponsive and reclusive as you say maybe she'd welcome a little more privacy and a little more distance from your paws. A columnist risks his neck when he pontificates on marital problems and divorce. But it seems to me that affectionate companionship should be the very essence of wedded life, and that if one party to a marriage is being deprived of this through no fault of his own, he's justified in looking elsewhere.

Royalty Plan Visit

Ottawa (UPI) — Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, will visit Toronto for four days in November to take part in the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, the governor general's office said. The visit to begin Nov. 14 will be the second Anne and Mark have made to Canada this year. They were in Ottawa during the winter.

POSTCARD

Stan Delaplane

All night there was a fearful racket under my hotel window. Great cries of triumph (or rage, or maybe somebody was getting a hotfoot) bounced off the antique buildings of the Medici.

In olden days of Florence, the Guelphs and Ghibellines threw each other up for grabs. I thought maybe they were at it again. Down below in the dark street — (you expect a swaggering swordsman in doublet to round the corner at any minute) — little groups of people shouted back and forth.

At 3 a.m. I was wide awake. I called a sleepy night waiter and told him to bring me a brandy. "Is it a religious festival?" I asked.

"Oh, no," he said. "It is the students. Our football team beat the team from Siena today." Big Game night!

It was late when I got up. A warm Italian sun fell on the city. As pure as the gold that was worked by Renaissance craftsmen on the Ponte Vecchio.

I went over to the Piazza della Signoria. Outdoor restaurants surround the square where Savonarola built the "bonfire of vanities."

In the city of arts, the Dominican preached against the pleasures of the senses.

On his famous bonfire, he piled wigs, books, paintings.

A year later, Savonarola was given a severe hotfoot himself.

For they cooked him to a crisp on the very same spot.

The waiter brought one of those tiny cups of coffee. The coffee itself comes up about a half inch in the cup. It requires careful sipping or you are through before you know it.

I got a half bottle of the beautiful Fuggie water, too. The waiter nodded approvingly and said: "Michelangelo drank it."

This is absolutely true. His testimonial is printed on the side of the label — so small that you can scarcely read it but worthwhile.

While chopping out statues and building St. Peter's and so on, poor Michelangelo got a kidney stone. (A matter I could sympathize with. I got somewhat rocky myself one time. Believe me, it's no summer cruise.)

Anyway, Michelangelo drank Fuggie water. And it cured him.

He wrote a long letter about it. The bottlers of Fuggie have excerpted the best parts (like a publisher does with a book review — "Brilliant!" etc.). They lifted the part where he says Fuggie cured him. And they printed it on the label.

It is a lovely square, facing on the majestic Old Palace. Centered by a statue of Cosimo the Elder on horseback. The fountain of Neptune tossing diamond spray in the air.

The Lion of Florence leans on the red lily. And the famous David and Hercules are marble-white in the sun.

The tables were full of Italians. And the Italians were full of coffee. Italy takes more coffee breaks than any country. Except Portugal where, it seems to me, all morning is a coffee break.

The water brought another coffee — it doesn't last long for Americans, though Italians can make it go for an hour.

He tried to tell me how the water cured Michelangelo. But he didn't have enough English. Nor I enough Italian. I got the general idea though.

He did point out another testimonial on the label. In 1258, Fuggie did wonders for Pope Bonifacio.

Books... for the informed.

1 The Decline and Fall of the American Dollar by Ronald Segal 135 This important book answers the vital questions: why is there a loss of confidence in the American economy? Is there a loss of confidence in capitalism itself? What can we do about it? As individuals? As a nation?

2 The Sovereign State of ITT by Anthony Smith 175 With information from many critics of ITT, most notably Ralph Nader, Rueben Robertson, Jack Anderson, and Brit Hume. This book reads like a fiction thriller and is the best book ever written about ITT.

3 'Do You Sincerely Want to Be Rich?' by Charles Raw, Bruce Page and Godfrey Hodgson 195 The astonishing story of Bernie Cornfeld, an unglamorous Brooklyn-bred social worker, who became the world's first perpetual motion money making machine. From a castle in Switzerland, surrounded by luxury and beautiful women, he parlayed 2 billion dollars of other people's money into a financial empire that collapsed with a thud heard around the world.

4 The Peter Principle by Dr. Laurence J. Peter and Raymond Hull 125 It tells why incompetence is no mistake in any area of human endeavor—why schools do not bestow wisdom, why governments cannot maintain order, why courts do not dispense justice, why prosperity fails to produce happiness, why Utopian plans never generate Utopias.

5 The Rich and The Super Rich by Ferdina and Kundberg 195 This book tells the shocking story of America today and it's silent multi-millionaire rulers who pay no taxes and run the country as tightly as any dictatorship.

6 Loss to the Street by Paul Hoffman 175 This is the story of big money and big decisions of private idiosyncrasies and public concealment. It is a book that is a must reading for all those who want to know who really runs America.

7 Corporate Power in America edited by Ralph Nader and Mark Green 295 Corporate Power in America is the product of the 'Conference on Corporate Accountability' held in the fall of 1971 in Washington, D.C. The conference brought together economists, political scientists, and lawyers who had distinguished themselves by their studies and commentary on corporate power. The aim of this book is to push beyond diagnosis to prescription, to emphasize not merely what is wrong but ways to right it.

8 America, Inc. by Morton Mintz and Jerry S. Cohen 150 As the consequences of corporate neglect mount more visibly, the popularization of the corporate condition through initiatory democratic rights coupled with remedies and representation on both on and within the corporation are sure to become pivotal public issues in the coming decade. What the authors of this book are saying to Americans is what Americans ought to be saying to themselves.

9 The Great Wall Street Scandal by R. L. Dirks and L. Gross cloth $35 The inside story of the Equity Funding hoax, the most monumental money swindle of modern times, the rise and fall of an American Corporation of personal fortunes made and lost, of fleeced stockholders of computerized crime and of a bludgeoned stock market. The Equity Funding story is more than the Watergate of Wall Street. It represents the abuse of enterpriser and the erosion of morality. A statement of our time.

10 The Future of the Corporation edited by Herman Kahn, cloth $55 This book addresses some of the most perplexing and least understood of new economic issues that are likely to affect the corporation and it's environment in the 70's and 80's, focusing on the change in our culture.

11 How to Run a Small Business by J. K. Lasser, cloth 95 Turn to this book if you want to know how to start a small business or buy an existing one: how to operate a small business efficiently or how to build and expand it profitably. This revised edition is a storehouse of practical advice, specific rules and proven business practices.

12 How to be a Super Salesman by Art Linkletter, cloth 65 Every person has been faced with the problem of selling something to someone and at the time, wishing he could do it better. This book is for such situations and is essential reading for all those who are actually in the business of selling or contemplating such a career.

13 Put Money in Your Pocket by Sheldon Jacobs, cloth 75 This basic book shows you how to select no load mutual funds of surpassing performance and provides you with the incentive and step-by-step guidance that can "put money in your pocket."

14 Stop! You're Killing the Business by Howard Klein, cloth 75 How to kill your small profitable business quickly and almost effortlessly is the subject of this infallible guide to bankruptcy and liquidation—ten instructive tales of corporate murder as outrageously funny as they are horrifying.

15 Management by Peter F. Drucker, cloth 150 Peter Drucker's new book is a landmark study of management as an organized body of knowledge. It not only deals with the techniques of effective management but looks at management from the outside and studies its tasks and requirements.

16 Bitty Business by Ovid Demans, cloth 105 An overwhelming indictment of corporate-political wrong-doing in the pursuit of wealth, power, and monopolistic invulnerability. From the greedy tax loopholes engineered by oil tycoons and corruptible government officials to the tax advantages bestowed on multinational corporations. They are all here. Howard Hughes. ITT. Robert Vesco and more all involved in one way or another with Bitty Business.

17 You Can Profit from a Monetary Crisis by Harry Browne, cloth $35 Monetary crises are here to stay, the latest is not the last. This book gives you Harry Browne's latest advice on how to protect yourself and even make money from the shattering events that happen one after another.

Stable Market Seen In Farm Land Prices

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Farm land values are likely to stay fairly stable or increase slightly in the next year, according to Robert Clymer, appraisal specialist for the Farm Credit Banks in Omaha.

In a talk before the Nebraska Agribusiness Club Monday, Clymer said he expected "land values will drop if we get two years of extremely dry weather back to back."

"I really don't expect to see land prices drop. I think we will see a stable market except possibly in irrigated areas or in areas with a potential for irrigation," he said.

Main Factors

Clymer listed several factors which he said would tend to discourage higher prices for land at the present time:

—The energy shortage, which tends to make farming more expensive, less profitable and discourages city people from buying land in the country for a place to live.

—Increases in fertilizer and fuel costs, which will reduce cash income from farming after

2 North Platte Men Accused Of Murder

North Platte (AP) — Two North Platte men were charged with second-degree murder Monday in connection with the March 13 death of Fred C. Roberts, 41, of North Platte.

Roberts, 41 at the time of his death, was found lying outside a tavern here March 11, and died two days later of injuries he sustained during an apparent beating.

Attorney James Schneider, appointed special prosecutor in the case, filed the charges Monday morning in Lincoln County Court against Melvin Isley, 22, and John Ready, 21.

The charges state that on March 11, 1974, Isley and Ready "did maliciously and without deliberation and premeditation, strike and wound Fred C. Roberts, and as a result thereof, he died on the 13th of March."

Isley has also been charged with perjury in connection with testimony he tendered during a coroner's inquest probing the Roberts' death. Those charges remain pending.

Isley and Ready appeared Monday afternoon before Lincoln County Judge Ronald Ruff, who set bond at $75,000 each. They were held in lieu of bond.

Runaway Asked To Come Home

Gering (UPI) — A distraught mother Monday issued a plea for her runaway teenaged daughter to return home, saying "We love her, we want her back."

"She was a good girl," said Mrs. Ron Martin of her daughter Ruth Marie, 17. "We didn't have that many problems with her."

Got In Voluntarily

But Detective Jim Livingston said Miss Martin apparently got in a car on her own free will. There were three teenaged males in the car, one from the Scottsbluff-Gering area and two from North Dakota.

Livingston said the two North Dakotans took Miss Martin first to Rapid City, S.D., and then down to Sioux City, Iowa, around Aug. 2, where they dropped her off.

"We traced her to the Sioux City area," Livingston said, "and lost contact from that point."

Mrs. Martin described her daughter as a "real easily persuaded person. She doesn't think anybody can do anything wrong."

'Fell Down Inside'

"I think she sort of fell down inside," Mrs. Martin said. "One of her girlfriends was a cheerleader and sort of rose above her. Her other girlfriend is getting married Aug. 9."

Livingston said the two North Dakotans had come to this western Nebraska area to do "garage work of some kind." When detectives located the area teenager, he gave them the names of the two North Dakotans. One was listed as a runaway.

'Ran Out Of Money'

"We talked with the young males by telephone," Livingston said. "They ran out of money in Sioux City and started hitchhiking back to North Dakota."

"They left Ruth in a Sioux City residential area and abandoned their car," Livingston continued. "They just wanted to go back home to North Dakota. I guess they just got tired of bumming around."

Livingston said Miss Martin told her parents she was going to a movie the night she disappeared. She left her car in the area, he said, "and doesn't appear to have any money."

"We assume she will try to get a job somewhere," Livingston said. "She doesn't have enough money to travel on."

'Good Worker'

Livingston said Miss Martin had been employed at an area rest home where she was described as a "good worker with a good record."

"She had never been in trouble before," he added.

Mrs. Martin said her daughter would be a senior at Gering High School in the fall.

"She made average grades," Mrs. Martin said. "We want her back. We want her to call home. We have four other children at home. They want her back too. We all love her."

New Friend Church Planned

Friend — Members of the United Church of Christ here have approved plans to build a new church building to be located on the site of the present church. Cost has been estimated at $153,000. Organized in 1875, the Congregational Church's first building here was dedicated in December, 1880. The present structure was dedicated in 1902 and rededicated in 1931 after a complete restoration. Lindburg Construction Co. of Lincoln will be in charge of the new construction project.

Press Group Selects Kirkman

Sidney (AP) — James Kirkman, publisher of the North Platte Telegraph, was elected president of the western division of the Nebraska Press Association during the group's annual mid-summer meeting here. John Saunders, publisher of the Crawford Tribune, was chosen vice president. About 50 persons, representing 15 western Nebraska newspapers, attended the two-day meeting.

Bus Fare Lowered For Senior Citizens

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska residents 60 or older will be able to ride Omaha's Metro Area Transit buses for a dime, beginning Aug. 18 during non-peak hours. The normal fare is 40 cents. The less expensive ride is compliments of the Nebraska Legislature, which last spring allocated $1 million to subsidize mass transit costs for the elderly.

Dudley To Direct Opera Company

Omaha (AP) — Jonathan Dudley, 33, principal conductor and music administrator for the New York Metropolitan Opera Studio for the past four years, has been named general director of the Omaha Opera Company. The new position is the first paid staff post in the organization's 16-year history. A native of Granville, Ohio, Dudley attended Denison and Boston universities, the Academy of Music in Vienna, Austria, and the National School of Opera in London.

Loans For Hail-Hit Areas Okayed

Washington (AP) — Farmers in Cheyenne, Garden and Knox counties in Nebraska, who suffered loss of crops and damaged property as a result of hailstorms in May and June, may apply for emergency loans through the Farmers Home Administration. The U.S. Department of Agriculture announcement said applications may be filed at the FHA office that serves the area. Loans are repayable at an interest rate of 5%.

Nebraska City Unit Appeals On Airport

The Nebraska City Airport Authority Monday notified the State Supreme Court that it is appealing a district court ruling which would cripple a drive for a municipal airport.

If sustained, the district court ruling would force the airport authority to refund approximately $16,000 in local tax funds used for planning, according to Richard Hoch, the authority's attorney.

District Court Judge William C. Colwell of Pawnee City held that the authority violated the Uniform Budget Act when it drew up its 1973 budget.

Hoch said the question at issue is whether a joint budget hearing held by the Nebraska City Council and the airport authority satisfied the law.

The appeal is the latest development in the struggle between supporters and opponents of a municipal airport for Nebraska City.

The issue arose in 1972 when former Mayor A. O. Giststad appointed the five-man Nebraska City Airport Authority to begin planning for a new municipal airport. Nebraska City and West Point are the only first class cities in the state which do not have municipal airports.

The authority commissioned two independent site studies which recommended locating the airport on a tract of land owned by Mrs. Louise Connolly of Omaha.

Mrs. Connolly and opponents of the municipal airport then mounted a petition drive which resulted in the ouster of Giststad.

Following the recall, Mrs. Connolly's attorney filed a taxpayer's lawsuit on behalf of Neal C. Williams to secure a refund of the $16,000 in local taxes raised for the airport authority.

The State Supreme Court will hear arguments in the case during its fall term.

Now Lows Are Setting Records

July's extreme heat has given way — at least temporarily — to a welcomed cool spell, and for the second consecutive night Omaha and Lincoln mercury dropped below previous records.

Monday's low of 49 at Omaha erased the 56 degrees recorded for Aug. 5 in 1915. Early Sunday, a reading of 44 entered the books ahead of 1915's 51.

In Lincoln, the thermometer hit 48 Monday, two degrees under the previous record set in 1889. Sunday's 45 eclipsed a temperature of 50 recorded in 1915. And Saturday's low of 52 tied with that date's record, set in 1894.

The cool weather cut water and electricity consumption in the Capital City, dropping water usage to an estimated 55-57 million gallons Monday.

Record consumption of 97.5 million gallons July 13 during the heat wave forced city officials to declare a mandatory odd-even water rationing system, under which customers whose addresses end in an odd number may water outdoors only on odd-numbered calendar days, and vice versa.

'Revolutionary' Urges New Officeholding Limit

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

"Radical politics" came to Lincoln Monday in the form of a soft-spoken 34-year-old who looks more like an insurance salesman than a self-proclaimed "revolutionary."

The "radical proposal" which shapes the politics of Tony Hodges is the Declaration of Independence.

Few Onlookers

Standing under leaden skies at the foot of Nebraska's towering Statehouse Monday noon, Hodges explained his proposition to a handful of onlookers.

In effect, it was a media event. Other than a family of tourists, State Sen. Steve Fowler and two of his friends, the listeners were all newsmen.

Hodges hopes to take his plan to the capitals of all 50 states in the next 100 days, culminating in an election day drive to deny reelection to any public officeholder who has served at least two consecutive terms.

Nebraska was his third stop. Missouri and Kansas came first on his tour.

The political power of incumbency combined with the governmental system of seniority has taken power from the people and installed it "in the hands of the very few," the citizen-politician and environmentalist from Hawaii said.

The Declaration of Independence has "not been repealed," Hodges said, but its promise has been largely nullified by the concentration of power.

"My radical proposal is to return to a democratic form of government that represents the people," he said.

"I want us to go back to a more representative democracy . . . to what people had in mind when they created this country."

Unicam Stepping Stone Ban Urged

Former Gov. Robert Crosby Monday suggested that state senators be prohibited from seeking any other elective office during the term for which they were elected to the Legislature.

In effect, such a proposal would require a legislator to wait for the next election after his term expired to seek another office.

The senator could not resign from the Legislature and qualify as a candidate prior to the conclusion of his legislative term.

Amendment

Crosby's proposal would require an amendment to the state constitution.

The advent of annual legislative sessions in 1971 has, for the first time, brought the Unicameral into regular session during election years. Crosby noted.

And that, in turn, has introduced "a discordant note" into legislative sessions in the form of politics practiced by some senators who are candidates for other public office, he indicated.

A prohibition against such candidacies would better allow the Legislature to "consider bills with a degree of detachment from the political scene," Crosby suggested.

8 Of 49 Candidates

During the 1974 session, eight of the 49 senators were candidates for other state or national offices. A similar situation developed during the Unicameral's first election year session, in 1972.

In order to operate effectively, the Legislature needs "a degree of freedom from political considerations," Crosby said.

Crosby's proposal was presented to a subcommittee of the Legislative Council's executive board, which is studying means of improving the

Subsoil Moisture Situation Worse

Ninety-nine per cent of Nebraska's counties now report subsoil moisture supplies short, compared to 93% listing an inadequate amount last week.

Topsoil moisture remains in short supply in 93% of the counties, the same as reported a week ago.

These figures were revealed Monday in the weekly state crop-weather report of the State-Federal Bureau of Agricultural Statistics.

Adequate topsoil moisture was reported in the Panhandle and northeastern counties that received rain during the past week.

Most Corn Poor

Seventy-three per cent of the state's dryland corn is reported in poor condition, 25% fair and only 2% good. Silks on the dryland corn are not pollinating normally, according to the report, and farmers are continuing to cut corn for supplemental livestock feed.

Irrigated corn condition was considered fair to good in 98% of the counties. Nearly 95% of the irrigated corn has silked, the ag experts noted.

"Producers continue to pump water around the clock trying to meet sufficient water demands of the crop," according to the report.

Sorghum conditions worsened during the past week with 42% rated as poor compared with 35% last week. Heading of the crop is below normal this year with 40% of the crop now headed compared with 59% normal, the report stated.

Also declining is the soybean condition with the crop listed as poor in 35% of the counties, compared to 27% last week.

Alfalfa condition improved very little last week with conditions remaining mostly poor to fair, the ag bureau said. About 40% of the third cutting has been harvested with indications of a very small crop. Some short second cutting acreages have been left for seed and are now in full bloom, it was noted.

Wild hay condition is reported poor in 63% of the counties, fair in 30% and good in 7%.

On the bright side, sugar beet and dry bean conditions in western Nebraska were listed as good.

'Good Beet Crop'

"Reports indicate a good beet crop with good sugar levels," the report noted.

Range and pasture feed supplies are declining and are now short in 97% of the counties, the ag bureau said.

"Livestock continue to remain in generally good to fair condition," it was indicated. "Hog men are marketing many sows and piggy sows due to weak feeder prices and high grain costs."

"Cattleman continue to cull breeding herds at abnormally high numbers and selling at depressed prices. Some cattle are being moved to winter ranges."

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—No charges will be filed against Mrs. Earline Collier, 42, of Omaha, in connection with the shooting death of another Omaha woman early Saturday morning.

The Douglas County Attorney's officer reported Monday that the shooting of Mrs. Ruth Long, 23, was apparently a case of self defense.

Mrs. Collier shot Mrs. Long in an apparent argument over another shooting incident which occurred Friday night.

Six Witnesses told investigators that Mrs. Long was brandishing a knife as she walked toward Mrs. Collier, and that a man carrying a gun was following the Long woman.

Mrs. Collier, armed with a handgun, shot Mrs. Long in the chest.

The argument apparently developed after Mrs. Long shot Mrs. Collier's 19-year old son in the ankle Friday night.

Army Report May Support Trial Defense

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

A document that tends to buttress defense claims of military involvement at Wounded Knee was discovered Sunday, according to a behind-the-scenes worker with the Wounded Knee Defense-Offense Committee.

An "after action" report by Brig. Gen. Volney Warner, who was stationed at Wounded Knee, states that Army representatives operated with "an equal vote in the decision making process" of federal forces.

The report was found stapled to an undated supply report as Defense-Offense Committee workers continued poring through a foot-high stack of papers turned over to the defense in the first Wounded Knee trial in Lincoln.

Tim Butz, a director of research for the Fifth Estate Security Education Corp. in Washington, D.C., was called to Lincoln when defense attorneys adopted alleged illegal military intervention as a line of defense in the Wounded Knee trial of Gregorio Jaramillo and Michael Sturdevant.

The nonprofit organization for which Butz works attempts to uncover police and intelligence activities and recently opposed the nomination of William Colby as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, according to Butz.

The defense claims that because of alleged illegal military intervention, federal officers at Wounded Knee were not acting lawfully when they arrested Jaramillo and Sturdevant as they allegedly were trying to sneak ammunition into Wounded Knee.

Butz said a meeting was held with Judge Warren K. Urbom on defense wishes to have the document introduced as evidence into the trial.

Although some witnesses have testified that military personnel were at Wounded Knee only as observers, the report by Brig. Gen. Warner, who was a colonel at the time of Wounded Knee, states that "military equipment, advice and assistance were provided to federal officials."

Despite that involvement, Warner wrote, "My interest . . . was to keep the Army off the reservation and encourage a negotiated settlement."

Warner states, however, that the Department of Justice was "guaranteed" that elements of the 82nd Airborne Division would come to the rescue of federal forces in trouble and that the division would maintain law and order on the reservation if federal forces unilaterally withdrew.

The reason for the discussion on introducing the document as evidence comes because Warner was excused as a witness Saturday.

Proceedings in the Wounded Knee trial were in recess Monday.

Stable Market Seen In Farm Land Prices

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Farm land values are likely to stay fairly stable or increase slightly in the next year, according to Robert Clymer, appraisal specialist for the Farm Credit Banks in Omaha.

In a talk before the Nebraska Agribusiness Club Monday, Clymer said he expected "land values will drop if we get two years of extremely dry weather back to back."

"I really don't expect to see land prices drop. I think we will see a stable market except possibly in irrigated areas or in areas with a potential for irrigation," he said.

Main Factors
Clymer listed several factors which he said would tend to discourage higher prices for land at the present time.

—The energy shortage, which tends to make farming more expensive, less profitable and discourages city people from buying land in the country for a place to live.

—Increases in fertilizer and fuel costs, which will reduce cash income from farming after costs are taken out of the income.

—Poor crop prospects in much of the area due to dry weather and lower livestock prices.

—Less demand for grain in export markets due to higher prices for fuel in other nations.

—Interest rates at 8.5% are higher than average return on investment in farming (around 5%), forcing investors to depend on inflation as a source of income.

About Same Rate

Clymer said nonfarm investors were buying land at about the same percentage of total land sales today as they have for the past several years.

"We surveyed 7,100 sales in Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming. On the average, we find that 7% of the sales are to nonfarmers, but Wyoming did show 16% of its sales to nonfarmers," he said.

"Most of the pressure for higher land prices comes from farmers who are adding to present operations. The average for the four-state area shows 66% of sales made to expand existing farms. In Nebraska the figure is 71%," he said.

Clymer and Burdett Swanson of the Lincoln Federal Land Bank explained the organization's lending policy. "We can lend up to 85% of the appraised value of land," Clymer said.

Depends On Borrower

Swanson said the actual amount lent depended more on the individual borrower than on the land itself. "I want to see the man's income tax forms for several years. We want people who are handling a lot of money because it takes a lot of money to pay off land that costs $1,000 an acre," Swanson said.

Swanson added that he wanted to personally inspect a farmer's operation before committing himself on a loan.

Swanson and Clymer agreed that the Federal Land Banks would lend a larger percentage of the purchase price of a farm to a fulltime farmer than to a nonfarmer.

Higher prices for crops and livestock had caused land prices to spiral some 46% between June 1964 and March 1973 before the drought and lower livestock prices slowed the upward price movement.

Figures based on a survey that excluded land near a city indicated that dryland farms had increased in value 26%, irrigated farms by 23% and dryland farms that had potential for conversion to irrigation by a considerably higher amount, according to Clymer. This survey was based on sales of land between March 1973 and March 1974.

Much of the increase in overall land values is due to sales of land for development near cities, he pointed out.

"This tends to spread across the state, however, because farm operators who sell to a developer have a lot of dollars to invest in farmland in the true farming areas of the state," Clymer observed.

"I want us to go back to a more representative democracy ... to what people had in mind when they created this country."

Hodges believes that allowing officeholders only two consecutive terms keeps government closer to the people because it means a large turnover in legislatures and Congress.

'Step Aside'

So, he said, the New American Revolution, for which he acts as spokesman, is asking officeholders who have served two or more consecutive terms to "step aside" before the November general election.

If they won't do that, Hodges said, he will ask the people "to make that decision for them" by voting against any incumbent who has held office for two or more consecutive terms.

Voters should choose "those who voluntarily promise to limit themselves to two terms" and who agree to sponsor legislation which will limit future officeholders to two consecutive terms, he said.

Hodges, a former airline pilot, unsuccessfully sought a U.S. Senate seat from Hawaii in 1970. Since then, he has been executive director of a Hawaii citizens organization called "Life of the Land."

Monday's only officeholder-onlooker was not a target of Hodges' concern. Fowler, a Lincoln senator, is in the midst of his first term in the Legislature.

No Charges To Be Filed

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—No charges will be filed against Mrs. Earline Collier, 42, of Omaha, in connection with the shooting death of another Omaha woman early Saturday morning.

The Douglas County Attorney's office reported Monday that the shooting of Mrs. Ruth Long, 23, was apparently a case of self defense.

Mrs. Collier shot Mrs. Long in an apparent argument over another shooting incident which occurred Friday night.

Six witnesses told investigators that Mrs. Long was brandishing a knife as she walked toward Mrs. Collier, and that a man carrying a gun was following the Long woman.

Mrs. Collier, armed with a handgun, shot Mrs. Long in the chest.

The argument apparently developed after Mrs. Long shot Mrs. Collier's 19-year old son in the ankle Friday night.

2 North Platte Men Accused Of Murder

North Platte (AP) — Two North Platte men were charged with second-degree murder Monday in connection with the March 13 death of Fred C. Roberts, also of North Platte.

Roberts, 41 at the time of his death, was found lying outside a tavern here March 11, and died two days later of injuries he sustained during an apparent beating.

Attorney James Schneider, appointed special prosecutor in the case, filed the charges Monday morning in Lincoln County Court against Melvin Isley, 22, and John Ready, 21.

The charges state that on March 11, 1974, Isley and Ready "did maliciously and without deliberation and premeditation, strike and wound Fred C. Roberts, and as a result thereof, he died on the 13th of March."

Isley has also been charged with perjury in connection with testimony he tendered during a coroner's inquest probing the Roberts' death. Those charges remain pending.

Isley and Ready appeared Monday afternoon before Lincoln County Judge Ronald Ruff, who set bond at $75,000 each. They were held in lieu of bond.

Runaway Asked To Come Home

Gering (UPI) — A distraught mother Monday issued a plea for her runaway teenage daughter to return home, saying "We love her, we want her back."

"She was a good girl," said Mrs. Ron Martin of her daughter Ruth Marie, 17. "We didn't have that many problems with her."

Got In Voluntarily
But Detective Jim Livingston said Miss Martin apparently got in a car on her own free will. There were three teenaged males in the car, one from the Scottsbluff-Gering area and two from North Dakota.

Livingston said the two North Dakotans took Miss Martin first to Rapid City, S.D., and then down to Sioux City, Iowa, around Aug. 2, where they dropped her off.

"We traced her to the Sioux City area," Livingston said, "and lost contact from that point."

Mrs. Martin described her daughter as a "real easily persuaded person. She doesn't think anybody can do anything wrong."

'Fell Down Inside'
"I think she sort of fell down inside," Mrs. Martin said. "One of her girlfriends was a cheerleader and sort of rose above her. Her other girlfriend is getting married Aug. 9."

Livingston said the two North Dakotans had come to this western Nebraska area to do "garage work of some kind." When detectives located the area teenager, he gave them the names of the two North Dakotans. One was listed as a runaway.

'Ran Out Of Money'

"We talked with the young males by telephone," Livingston said. "They ran out of money in Sioux City and started hitchhiking back to North Dakota."

"They left Ruth in a Sioux City residential area and abandoned their car," Livingston continued. "They just wanted to go back home to North Dakota. I guess they just got tired of bumming around."

Livingston said Miss Martin told her parents she was going to a movie the night she disappeared. She left her car in the area, he said, "and doesn't appear to have any money."

"We assume she will try to get a job somewhere," Livingston said. "She doesn't have enough money to travel on."

'Good Worker'
Livingston said Miss Martin had been employed at an area rest home where she was described as a "good worker with a good record."

"She had never been in trouble before," he added.

Mrs. Martin said her daughter would be a senior at Gering High School in the fall.

"She made average grades," Mrs. Martin said. "We want her back. We want her to call home. We have four other children at home. They want her back too. We all love her."

Nebraska City Unit Appeals On Airport

The Nebraska City Airport Authority Monday notified the State Supreme Court that it is appealing a district court ruling which would cripple a drive for a municipal airport.

If sustained, the district court ruling would force the airport authority to refund approximately $16,000 in local tax funds used for planning, according to Richard Hoch, the authority's attorney.

District Court Judge William C. Colwell of Pawnee City held that the authority violated the Uniform Budget Act when it drew up its 1973 budget.

Hoch said the question at issue is whether a joint budget hearing held by the Nebraska City Council and the airport authority satisfied the law.

The appeal is the latest development in the struggle between supporters and opponents of a municipal airport for Nebraska City.

The issue arose in 1972 when former Mayor A. O. Gigstad appointed the five-man Nebraska City Airport Authority to begin planning for a new municipal airport. Nebraska City and West Point are the only first class cities in the state which do not have municipal airports.

The authority commissioned two independent site studies which recommended locating the airport on a tract of land owned by Mrs. Louise Connolly of Omaha.

Mrs. Connolly and opponents of the municipal airport then mounted a petition drive which resulted in the ouster of Gigstad.

Following the recall, Mrs. Connolly's attorney filed a taxpayer's lawsuit on behalf of Neal C. Willis to secure a refund of the $16,000 in local taxes raised for the airport authority.

The State Supreme Court will hear arguments in the case during its fall term.

Now Lows Are Setting Records

July's extreme heat has given way — at least temporarily — to a welcomed cool spell, and for the second consecutive night Omaha and Lincoln mercury dropped below previous records.

Monday's low of 49 at Omaha erased the 56 degrees recorded for Aug. 5 in 1915. Early Sunday, a reading of 44 entered the books ahead of 1915's 51.

In Lincoln, the thermometer hit 48 Monday, two degrees under the previous record set in 1889. Sunday's 45 eclipsed a temperature of 50 recorded in 1915. And Saturday's low of 52 tied with that date's record, set in 1894.

The cool weather cut water and electricity consumption in the Capital City, dropping water usage to an estimated 55-57 million gallons Monday.

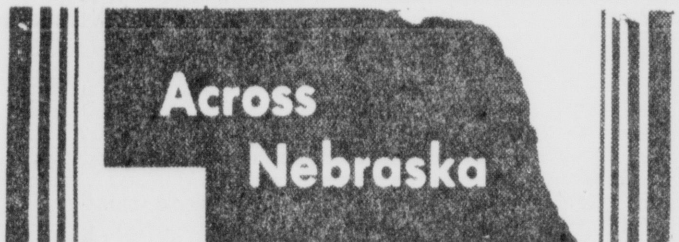

Record consumption of 97.5 million gallons July 13 during the heat wave forced city officials to declare a mandatory odd-even water rationing system, under which customers whose addresses end in an odd number may water outdoors only on odd-numbered calendar days, and vice versa.

Electricity consumption Monday peaked at 165,000 kilowatt hours between 1 and 2 p.m., compared to the record of 835,000 kwh used on July 18.

Grand Island also broke a record Monday with its low of 55 degrees, one under the previous record set in 1907 and repeated in 1948.

Also welcomed by Nebraskans were the rains falling in southwestern and western regions.

McCook topped the list with 1.44 inches, while Hayes Center recorded 1.25, Stockville .95, Palisade .88, Alliance .20, and Scottsbluff .13.

New Friend Church Planned

Friend — Members of the United Church of Christ here have approved plans to build a new church building to be located on the site of the present church. Cost has been estimated at $153,000. Organized in 1875, the Congregational Church's first building here was dedicated in December, 1880. The present structure was dedicated in 1902 and rededicated in 1931 after a complete restoration. Lindburg Construction Co. of Lincoln will be in charge of the new construction project.

Press Group Selects Kirkman

Sidney (AP) — James Kirkman, publisher of the North Platte Telegraph, was elected president of the western division of the Nebraska Press Association during the group's annual mid-summer meeting here. John Saunders, publisher of the Crawford Tribune, was chosen vice president. About 50 persons, representing 15 western Nebraska newspapers, attended the two-day meeting.

Bus Fare Lowered For Senior Citizens

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska residents 60 or older will be able to ride Omaha's Metro Area Transit buses for a dime, beginning Aug. 18 during non-peak hours. The normal fare is 40 cents. The less expensive ride is compliments of the Nebraska Legislature, which last spring allocated $1 million to subsidize mass transit costs for the elderly.

Dudley To Direct Opera Company

Omaha (AP) — Jonathan Dudley, 33, principal conductor and music administrator for the New York Metropolitan Opera Studio for the past four years, has been named general director of the Omaha Opera Company. The new position is the first paid staff post in the organization's 16-year history. A native of Granville, Ohio, Dudley attended Denison and Boston universities, the Academy of Music in Vienna, Austria, and the National School of Opera in London.

Loans For Hail-Hit Areas Okayed

Washington (AP) — Farmers in Cheyenne, Garden and Knox counties in Nebraska, who suffered loss of crops and damaged property as a result of hailstorms in May and June, may apply for emergency loans through the Farmers Home Administration. The U.S. Department of Agriculture announcement said applications may be filed at the FHA office that serves the area. Loans are repayable at an interest rate of 5%.

Trucking Firms Denied Emergency Rates Hike

For the second time in a month, the Nebraska Public Service Commission has denied an emergency rate increase for approximately 400 intrastate trucking firms lumped in the category of general commodity haulers.

Instead, commissioners voted to send a staff accountant to Kansas City to determine the validity of financial data presented by the trucking firms at a hearing last week.

The commissioners expressed concern that the evidence supporting the rate increase was based on one week's business last November and might not reflect the total financial picture.

James Paine, director of the commission's motor transportation department, said the accountant's evaluation would be completed in time for the commission to act on the rate increase within three weeks.

Seek 6% Hike

The truckers are seeking a 6% rate hike on loads under 5,000 lbs. and a 3% hike on loads 5,000 lbs. and more. The truckers said the increases are needed to offset wages increases called for in union contracts.

The general commodity haulers first asked for the emergency rate increase in early July when their application was filed. The commission unanimously refused.

Following last week's public hearing on the request, the truckers asked Paine to renew their motion for an emergency increase. Paine said the truckers feared the commission would not act on the request until late September or October.

Dry Freight Included

The general commodity

category includes haulers of dry freight, mainly boxed goods. Haulers of sand and gravel, petroleum, livestock and bulk cement are not included.

The commission also overruled a motion for a rehearing on a commission decision abolishing a zone rate structure for sand and gravel haulers in Omaha. The rehearing was requested by the sand and gravel shippers and received support from Commissioner Duane Gay. Commissioners Robert Marland, John Swanson and James Munnelly supported their earlier position that the zone rates were unfair to truckers and should be changed to a flat mileage basis.

"This is going to create so many leasing problems," Gay said, "that I predict the shippers are going to revert to private carriers and you'll hurt the people you're trying to help."

Market Slightly Higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rang up a moderate gain Monday in a session of several sharp swings prompted by speculation on Wall Street over where the impeachment issue would lead next.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 7.82 at 760.40, and advances outnumbered declines 823 to 524 among the 1,751 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

The NYSE's composite index of nearly 1,500 common stocks rose 36.1 to 41.53.

Brokers said the market showed a strong sensitivity to developments in Washington throughout the day.

After a sluggish opening, analysts noted, prices swung upward when a high-ranking Senate Republican, Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, said of President Nixon:

"I think we've arrived at a point where the nation's interests and his own interests would be best served by resigning."

At mid-afternoon the market surged to a gain of better than 13 points in the Dow when Gerald Warren, deputy White House press secretary, said he would have a statement for reporters late in the day.

Brokers said that prompted buying on the premise that the statement might produce some important development toward resolution of the impeachment issue.

"The market is very oversold right now and just grasping at anything," noted Alan R. Shaw at Harris, Upham & Co.

Shortly thereafter news reports reached Wall Street quoting Warren as saying the statement would concern neither resignation by the President nor any plans of his for a major address to the country.

On that news, analysts said, the market pulled back somewhat until the close.

As it developed, Warren had for newsmen a statement from Nixon announcing the release of transcripts of three conversations which the President said "may further damage my case."

Clorox Co., up 1/2 at 8 3/4, was far and away the day's most active issue, thanks largely to a 483,800-share block at 9. Additional chunks of 20,000 and 15,000 shares also changed hands at that price.

Many of the most emphatic gains were posted by issues in the blue chip and glamour sectors, prime targets in the selling that swept the popular averages to four-year lows last week.

Games You Can't Lose Developed

(Editor's note: If you're tired of losing at games, "monster monopoly" and "earth ball" may be just what you've been looking for. Robert Yeager of the San Francisco Bureau of McGraw-Hill World News tells how.)

By ROBERT YEAGER

San Francisco — An equal number of men and women are arranged in a circle, all on their knees. Suddenly, one member of the group, a man, crawls outside the ring and begins barking like a dog. A middle-aged woman follows suit but instead lifts her voice in the harsh, quacking sound of a duck.

The foregoing isn't a scene from a psychotherapy ward. It's a group of northern Californians learning to play what they call "The Mating Game," one of a series of innovative contests designed by a group called "New Games."

The "Mating Game" begins with participants receiving paired pictures of animals. Keeping their identities secret, players try to find their mates by imitating their sounds. A previously selected referee decides whether the matchmaking has been successful.

Based in San Francisco, New Games Foundation came into being late last year and rolled into high gear this spring. Its purpose: to develop new games and modify old ones so that the element of winning or losing is either eliminated or sharply de-emphasized. The ultimate goal: to teach all of us that play should be for the sake of playing.

"We don't believe in the principle of winning or losing," says Ms. Pat Farrington, one of New Games' originators. "It starts in grammar school — if two teams play, one half of them have to be losers. The danger is that the idea of losing becomes permanently reinforced."

Stresses Fun

Accordingly, New Games stresses the fun of physical activity, cooperative effort and sometimes strong moral lessons as well.

Take "Monster Monopoly," for example. The game is played normally except that each player rolls a die for a mythical monster. The monster collects double the money on all playoffs and must acquire property at each opportunity. Thus, says Ms. Farrington, the game eliminates competition between individual players. Indeed, they are left with a single choice: either band together or be gobbled up by the "monster."

In "Infinite Volleyball," both teams keep the ball in the air as long as possible (the current record is 8 times). In "Earth Ball," two teams cooperate in keeping aloft a 6-foot ball painted to resemble a world globe while still trying to move to their respective goals.

There's also new Frisbee, Dho-Dho (described as yogi tag) and Environmental Tag — another educational game in which tag is combined with a nature walk and players can only escape being tagged out if they touch a plant whose proper name they can identify.

Tournaments Held

New Games already has held two well-attended tournaments and acted on a consulting capacity to about half a dozen by area cities. The City of Belmont, for example, has decided to formally incorporate "New Games" in its recreation program.

"We think it's better if everybody is a player," says Ms. Farrington who describes herself as "a loser all my life. I was always too short or not coordinated enough."

"Take the average football game," she continues, "You have 30,000 or 40,000 people watching 22 people play. It's sad. It's gotten to the point where only super specimens can participate in sports."

At the moment, volunteers are writing a New Games handbook they hope can be used in schools and recreation departments around the country.

One of their current consulting jobs is planning an elementary school playground designed for New Games.

Sales Identify Top Industries

New York (AP) — Fortune magazine published a list of the world's top industrial corporations showing that eight of the top 10 are American and the other two controlled by British-Dutch combines.

The leaders, ranked by the magazine according to sales, are General Motors, Exxon, Ford, Royal Dutch-Shell, Chrysler, General Electric, Texaco, Mobil Oil, Unilever and IBM. Royal Dutch-Shell and Unilever are the non-American corporations.

IF MUZAK were here, this chair would be filled EVERYDAY!

A bored employee will use any reason to stay off the job, and just nine days absenteeism in a year can cost you $125 per employee, based on the minimum wage scale. Multiply that by the number of people you employ and the cost can be staggering. Few businesses today, large or small, can afford profit erosion like this. More and more now subscribe to the MUZAK service. Independent studies show that MUZAK increases alertness and vigilance.

The MUZAK service is different from mere background music. Far different! For years, scientists studied the ebb and flow of employee efficiency.

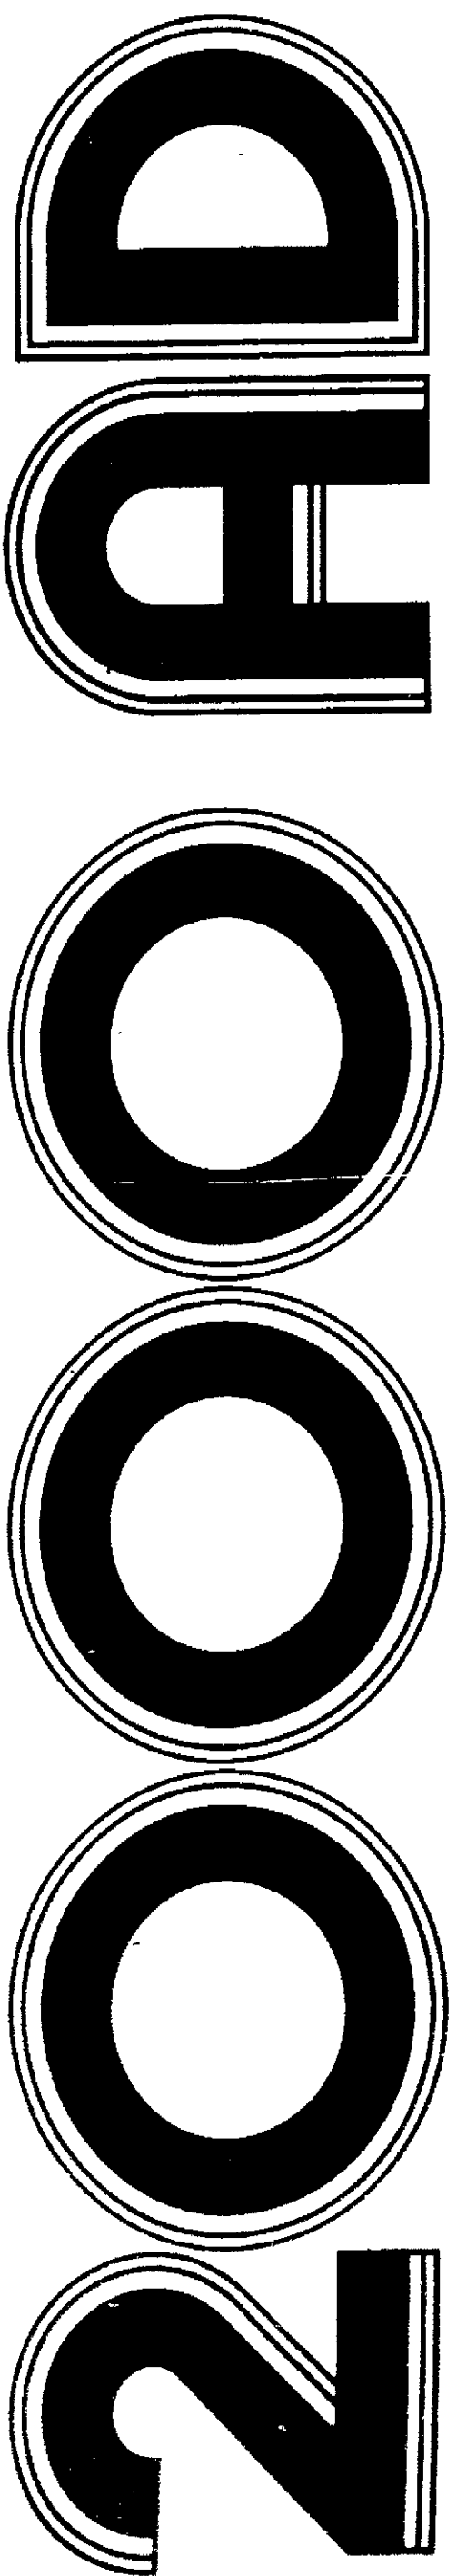

They found it flows in a cyclic curve. By studying this curve and the employee moods underlying it, MUZAK specialists were able to discover, through exacting tests, just what kind of music would best stimulate the employee at the times of day when efficiency is lowest.

Thus, Music by MUZAK is psychologically selected, arranged, recorded and programmed to vary throughout the day and fit the employee efficiency curve. There is an answer to profit erosion and MUZAK has it.

What will homes use for energy in the year 2000 AD?

Natural gas and electricity.

You shouldn't be surprised. But the current energy picture is so muddled, you probably don't know what's what any more.

So here's what: People will be using both natural gas and electricity for years to come.

In this century, natural gas will play an important role in making the nation's energy go farther. And that is because gas is more efficient than electricity for the big jobs around the house. It's the natural fuel. It takes no other forms of energy to produce gas as it does to produce electricity. Also, gas loses very little of its "power" on the way to your home while electricity loses two-thirds of its potential in the processes of generation and transmission.

In the next century, natural gas reserves will be supplemented by gas made from coal in a process called gassification.

And electricity will be generated more by coal and nuclear power. (It is estimated that nuclear plants will furnish about one-fourth of all electricity by 2000.)

Conserving all forms of energy will be an American way of life for an indefinite period of time.

White Male, Under 30, Typical DWI Arrestee

The typical person arrested for driving while intoxicated in Lincoln last year was a white male, under 30, with a blood alcohol concentration of .15% or higher. More than likely the person was arrested in the downtown central business district or on Cornhusker Hwy. on a Saturday night between midnight and 4 a.m.

That profile is based on a study by the Lincoln Alcohol Safety Action Project (LASAP).

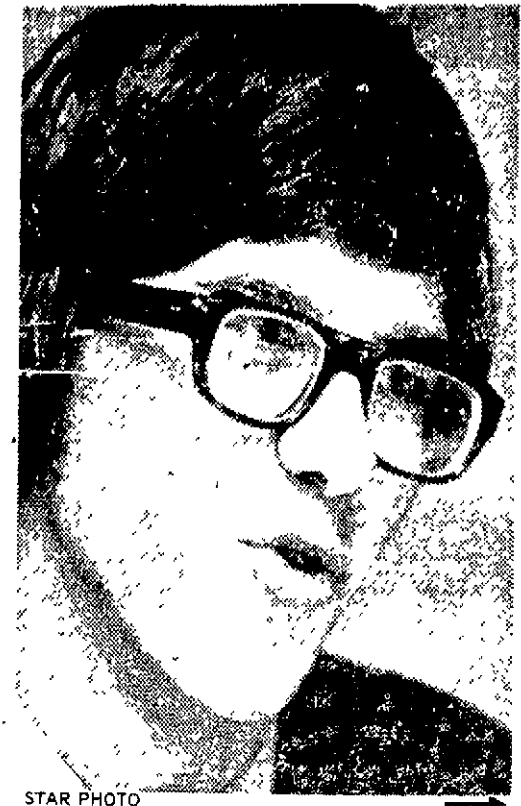

There were 1,632 driving while intoxicated (DWI) arrests in Lincoln during 1973.

Specifically the study showed that 54% of all DWI arrests involved persons under 30, that 91% of those arrested were male and that 58% of all DWI arrests were made between midnight and 4 a.m.

According to the study 23% of all DWI arrests were made on Cornhusker Hwy. and 29% were in the downtown central business districts. The remaining arrests were scattered throughout the city.

A person is legally considered to be driving while intoxicated if his or her blood alcohol has a concentration of .10% or higher.

LASAP is a program aimed at reducing the number of drivers who drive while over their legal limit of blood alcohol concentration. The project's federal funding expires after this fiscal year and discussions are now underway to determine the level of local funding for the program.

CAR PRESIDENT... Schmidt.

All CAR's 'Not Conservative'

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Children of the American Revolution aren't necessarily conservative, national president Rodney H. C. Schmidt says.

Schmidt, of Alexandria, Va., was in Lincoln Monday, attending the two-day workshop of the Great Plains Children of the American Revolution. Forty members from a seven-state area are attending the session.

CAR is closely affiliated with the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) Sons of the American Revolution (SAR), and Sons of the Revolution (SR), all of which are closely identified with conservative causes.

But Schmidt points out that the national president who preceded him was "a liberal college junior at Berkeley."

His organization takes no stands on major issues, but individual stands are encouraged among members.

"I would hate to see the organization become political and have people try to manipulate us," Schmidt said.

The organization is open to members from birth to 22 years of age who can trace their direct blood lineage to an ancestor who gave service in the American Revolution.

The 18-year-old group leader — the youngest ever to be elected national president — stressed that CAR is a separate and self-standing organization which receives leadership and financial aid from its parent groups, the DAR, SAR and SR.

"There is respect there between the seniors and the members," Schmidt said. "Although the DAR is a strong influence on us," he continued, "they really don't control us."

Stressing the educational objectives of CAR, Schmidt feels that "everyone can have an opinion, but to have an informed opinion is something else. CAR tries to make learning about our country a little more fun than school would be."

A closer look at the legislative process, revolving around the theme "Your Government, Your Responsibility" is a CAR focus this year.

Conservation comprises another group interest.

Schmidt said the approach is to encourage people not to be "arm chair" conservationists, but to set up "self-guided tours" in their communities to highlight examples of good conservation efforts.

Voted the most conservative member of his high school graduating class, Schmidt defended the diversity of the CAR membership. "The president before me was a liberal college junior at Berkeley."

Dyas Says Thone Is 'PR Congressman'

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Fielding a dozen questions at his 36th campaign coffee journey through Lincoln neighborhoods, Democratic congressional nominee Hess Dyas Monday night characterized Rep. Charles Thone as a public relations congressman.

"He's done a very good job of public relations," Dyas told 19 persons gathered in the Havelock home of Neil and Nancy Sipp.

People "know his name, but not his record," Dyas declared.

In a poll of 430 First District residents commissioned by Dyas last December, he said, 62% of the respondents had a favorable impression of the Republican congressman.

"No Opinion"

But 75% expressed "no opinion" on Thone's major accomplishment in office, and 79% voiced "no opinion" on his major failure, Dyas said.

Thone is a "political success... as quite a fence straddler," Dyas said. "He has tried to play it safe."

And the congressman benefits from the comparison which voters make with Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis, Dyas said.

But what the First District needs is "more aggressive and vocal leadership" which can address its problems, Dyas said.

That's what he hopes to provide if he can convince voters to elect him this November, he noted.

Lot Of Work

"I've got a lot of work to do on name recognition," Dyas acknowledged. The December poll indicated that 57% of the respondents had never heard of him, he noted.

Thirty-six coffee receptions in Lincoln neighborhoods, combined with door-to-door campaigning in precinct after precinct, should help overcome that problem, he said.

And, in talking to and listening to people at such gatherings, Dyas said, he believes he has become "a lot more sensitive to people's concerns."

Shirtsleeved and sipping iced tea, Dyas Monday night heard concerns ranging from inflation to gun control, and came down hard for some modern-day trust-busting.

Break Up Trusts

"I think it's time to break up the non-competitive trusts," he said, pointing, in particular, to energy corporations.

Dyas said tax reform would also be "a key concern" of his if he reaches the House of Representatives. Too many working people now bear "an unfair share" of the tax burden, he said.

His attitude on legislation to help the working man may provide "the most clear cut difference" with Thone, Dyas said. The congressman has not shown much concern for the laboring man, he said.

Competitive Bid

Dyas said he will be able to provide Thone with "a good competitive campaign" which the congressman did not face in either 1970 or 1972.

In 1970, Dyas said, the Democratic nominee spent $15,000 while Thone expended $86,000.

In 1972, Dyas said, the Democratic nominee had $26,000 in campaign expenditures compared to Thone's $91,000.

Already, in 1974, Dyas said, he has raised more than $50,000 for his campaign.

The coffee gathering completed a round of 36 receptions in Lincoln which began last April. Dyas will now take the coffee campaign into other First District communities.

Question Unasked

Surprisingly, one question which did not arise during Monday night's meeting was the impeachment or resignation of President Nixon.

Although he understands the arguments of those who prefer to see the impeachment process followed to its conclusion, Dyas told a newsman after the meeting, he believes "the President could save himself and the country a lot of unnecessary agony if he would resign."

Until the issue is resolved, Dyas said, many national needs will remain unmet.

Scholarships In West Denied To Hungarians

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A Budapest newspaper said Monday an unspecified number of Hungarian scientists was banned from accepting scholarships in the West, to prevent a form of "brain drain."

The newspaper, Magyar Hirnap, asserted that "highly developed countries in order to save large sums they would have to spend on training specialists, are trying to 'buy brains' by inviting leading scientists from Socialist countries to work in a scientific institution for a year or two."

White Male, Under 30, Typical DWI Arrestee

The typical person arrested for driving while intoxicated in Lincoln last year was a white male, under 30, with a blood alcohol concentration of .15% or higher.

More than likely the person was arrested in the downtown central business district or on Cornhusker Hwy. on a Saturday night between midnight and 4 a.m.

That profile is based on a study by the Lincoln Alcohol Safety Action Project (LASAP).

There were 1,632 driving while intoxicated (DWI) arrests in Lincoln during 1973.

Specifically the study showed that 54% of all DWI arrests involved persons under 30, that 91% of those arrested were male and that 58% of all DWI arrests were made between midnight and 4 a.m.

According to the study 23% of all DWI arrests were made on Cornhusker Hwy. and 29% were in the downtown central business districts. The remaining arrests were scattered throughout the city.

A person is legally considered to be driving while intoxicated if his or her blood alcohol has a concentration of .10% or higher.

LASAP is a program aimed at reducing the number of drivers who drive while over their legal limit of blood alcohol concentration. The project's federal funding expires after this fiscal year and discussions are now underway to determine the level of local funding for the program.

CAR PRESIDENT... Schmidt.

All CAR's 'Not Conservative'

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Children of the American Revolution aren't necessarily conservative, national president Rodney H. C. Schmidt says.

Schmidt, of Alexandria, Va., was in Lincoln Monday, attending the two-day workshop of the Great Plains Children of the American Revolution. Forty members from a seven-state area are attending the session.

CAR is closely affiliated with the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), Sons of the American Revolution (SAR), and Sons of the Revolution (SR), all of which are closely identified with conservative causes.

But Schmidt points out that the national president who preceded him was "a liberal college junior at Berkeley."

His organization takes no stands on major issues, but individual stands are encouraged among members.

"I would hate to see the organization become political and have people try to manipulate us," Schmidt said.

The organization is open to members from birth to 22 years of age who can trace their direct blood lineage to an ancestor who gave service in the American Revolution.

The 18-year-old group leader — the youngest ever to be elected national president — stressed that CAR is a separate and self-standing organization which receives leadership and financial aid from its parent groups, the DAR, SAR and SR.

"There is respect there between the seniors and the members," Schmidt said. "Although the DAR is a strong influence on us," he continued, "they really don't control us."

Stressing the educational objectives of CAR, Schmidt feels that "everyone can have an opinion, but to have an informed opinion is something else. CAR tries to make learning about our country a little more fun than school would be."

A closer look at the legislative process, revolving around the theme "Your Government, Your Responsibility" is a CAR focus this year.

Conservation comprises another group interest.

Schmidt said the approach is to encourage people not to be "arm chair" conservationists, but to set up "self-guided tours" in their communities to highlight examples of good conservation efforts.

Voted the most conservative member of his high school graduating class, Schmidt defended the diversity of the CAR membership. "The president before me was a liberal college junior at Berkeley."

Dyas Says Thone Is 'PR Congressman'

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Fielding a dozen questions at his 36th campaign coffee journey through Lincoln neighborhoods, Democratic congressional nominee Hess Dyas Monday night characterized Rep. Charles Thone as a public relations congressman.

"He's done a very good job of public relations," Dyas told 19 persons gathered in the Havelock home of Neil and Nancy Sipp.

People "know his name, but not his record," Dyas declared.

In a poll of 430 First District residents commissioned by Dyas last December, he said, 62% of the respondents had a favorable impression of the Republican congressman.

"No Opinion" But 75% expressed "no opinion" on Thone's major accomplishment in office, and 79% voiced "no opinion" on his major failure, Dyas said.

Thone is a "political success... as quite a fence straddler," Dyas said. "He has tried to play it safe."

And the congressman benefits from the comparison which voters make with Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis, Dyas said.

But what the First District needs is "more aggressive and vocal leadership" which can address its problems, Dyas said. That's what he hopes to provide if he can convince voters to elect him this November, he noted.

Lot Of Work "I've got a lot of work to do on name recognition," Dyas acknowledged. The December poll indicated that 57% of the respondents had never heard of him, he noted.

Thirty-six coffee receptions in Lincoln neighborhoods, combined with door-to-door campaigning in precinct after precinct, should help overcome that problem, he said.

And, in talking to and listening to people at such gatherings, Dyas said, he believes he has become "a lot more sensitive to people's concerns."

Shirtsleeved and sipping iced tea, Dyas Monday night heard concerns ranging from inflation to gun control, and came down hard for some modern-day trust-busting.

Break Up Trusts "I think it's time to break up the non-competitive trusts," he said, pointing, in particular, to energy corporations.

Dyas said tax reform would also be "a key concern" of his if he reaches the House of Representatives. Too many working people now bear "an unfair share" of the tax burden, he said.

His attitude on legislation to help the working man may provide "the most clear cut difference" with Thone, Dyas said. The congressman has not shown much concern for the laboring man, he said.

Competitive Bid Dyas said he will be able to provide Thone with "a good competitive campaign" which the congressman did not face in either 1970 or 1972.

In 1970, Dyas said, the Democratic nominee spent $15,000 while Thone expended $86,000.

In 1972, Dyas said, the Democratic nominee had $26,000 in campaign expenditures compared to Thone's $91,000.

Already, in 1974, Dyas said, he has raised more than $50,000 for his campaign.

The coffee gathering completed a round of 36 receptions in Lincoln which began last April. Dyas will now take the coffee campaign into other First District communities.

Question Unasked Surprisingly, one question which did not arise during Monday night's meeting was the impeachment or resignation of President Nixon.

Although he understands the arguments of those who prefer to see the impeachment process followed to its conclusion, Dyas told a newsman after the meeting, he believes "the President could save himself and the country a lot of unnecessary agony if he would resign."

Until the issue is resolved, Dyas said, many national needs will remain unmet.

Cycle Crash Kills Iowan

Omaha (AP) — A motorcycle collision Monday claimed the life of Donald R. Larsen of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

His cycle and a car driven by Lilly F. Sarah, 18, of Prairie Village, Kan., collided at a mid-town intersection.

Miss Sarah was booked on suspicion of failing to yield the right of way, Omaha police said.

Scholarships In West Denied To Hungarians

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A Budapest newspaper said Monday an unspecified number of Hungarian scientists was banned from accepting scholarships in the West, to prevent a form of "brain drain."

The newspaper, Magyar Hirlap, asserted that "highly developed countries in order to save large sums they would have to spend on training specialists, are trying to 'buy brains' by inviting leading scientists from socialist countries to work in a scientific institution for a year or two."

Arabs Announce Boycott Of Sony

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The Japanese firm Sony was blacklisted Monday for dealing with Israel, Arab boycott headquarters here announced.

The Japanese firm, which has substantial investments in Arab countries, failed to reply to a warning one year ago to stop dealing with Israel, the office said.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Tuesday
Leo and Sagittarius persons love to be consulted. If you want to learn a lesson or the answer to a question, check with these signs. Gemini may give you a facile answer, but Leo and Sagittarius will dig for you and come up with information which is solid, dependable — and deserves praise and affection. That's your price — a glowing look, a carol. All of us are different, unique, funny and tragic. Sagittarius and Leo will do anything if properly asked — and that can be funny in the tragic way that reality sometimes is.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pleasure comes from being privileged to secrets, from working behind the scenes, from romantic interludes. Gain indicated through co-operation with special group, charity organization. You could be making a movie or television appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some wishes are fulfilled. You are given surprise by one close to you — and it is associated with finances. You get chance for fresh start. You can be more independent, creative. You will have additional room for testing, experimenting, putting ideas to work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get needed cooperation enabling you to finish important assignment, project. Prestige is elevated. Intuition is on target. Accent is on achievement, promotion, ability to deal with professional superiors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar-Jupiter aspects coincide now with journeys, education, philosophical enlightenment and communication. You live and learn. You get around and socialize. You grow in emotional sense. You rediscover you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotional involvement is indicated. Don't play games — stakes are high and could be "for keeps." Mate, partner wants to discuss budget, money, savings, interest rates and possible investments. Check details. Be willing to make concessions based on factual information.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Perfectionism. You will have additional room for testing, experimenting, putting ideas to work. You get favorable reply to special request.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Service, achievement, the building of a solid base — these are emphasized. Taurus and another Libra are likely to be in charge. Health shows improvement. Appetite returns. Be aware of nutritional requirements. Avoid junk foods.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You speculate — and land on your feet. Element of luck or timing rides beside you and smiles your way. Don't get a big head. Inexorable forces pull your way and you don't really have much to do with it. Be gracious and grateful. And buy an expensive gift for member of opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study, scorpions make favorable impression on one who pulls purse strings. You can get money for research, investment or home improvement. Capricorn, cancer persons figure prominently. You deal from position of strength. Know it — act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You gain through fresh contacts with neighbors, relatives. Turn over new leaf. Laugh at your own foibles. Approach one who battles with you — do so in charming manner. You'll be amazed at reception. Let bygones be bygones: be civil, sophisticated. Then you'll be noticed in very high esteem!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get windfall. Means what you earned comes your way in somewhat of a rush. Accent is on money, gain, profit, constructive results. Added recognition is due. However, avoid paying more than you should — tight tendency toward personal intuition. You will understand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You look impressive. People want to do favors for you in order to win your favor. Don't promise more than you can deliver. Intuition is to say yes, yes and yes. Key to success is to aid those willing to help themselves. You will extricate yourself from dilemma. That's cause for celebration.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are musical, diplomatic, have sweet tooth, will find that September is your most important month of 1974. Taurus, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. You are loving, passionate many times, impulsive almost all of the time, dramatic, charming and sexy. If single, you are due to marry. If married, there could be an addition to your family. Married or single, you're going into business — for yourself.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR
Forecast For Tuesday

Leo and Sagittarius persons love to be consulted. If you want to learn a lesson or the answer to a question, check with the signs. Gemini may give you a facile answer, but Leo and Sagittarius will dig for you and work for you and research and come up with information which is solid, dependable — and deserves praise and affection. That's your price — a glowing look, a caress. All of us are different, unique, funny and tragic. Sagittarius and Leo will do anything if properly asked — and that can be funny in the tragic way that reality sometimes is.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pleasure comes from being privileged to secrets, from working behind the scenes, from romantic interludes. Gain indicated through co-operation with special group, charity organization. You could be making a movie or television appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some wishes are fulfilled. You are given surprise by one close to you — and it is associated with finances. You get chance for fresh start. You can be more independent, creative. You will have additional room for testing, experimenting, putting ideas to work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get needed co-operation, enabling you to finish important assignment, project. Prestige is elevated. Intuition is on target. Accent is on achievement, promotion, ability to deal with professional superiors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar-Jupiter aspects coincide now with journeys, education, philosophical enlightenment and communication. You live and learn. You grow in emotional sense. You rediscover you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotional involvement is indicated. Don't play games — stakes are high and could be "for keeps." Mate partner wants to discuss budget, money, savings, interest rates and possible investments. Check details. Be willing to make concessions based on factual information.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Partnerships, legal affairs, domestic life, and creative work. If single, question of marriage could be paramount. Married or single, you may close deal which makes you feel secure. Questions are answered. You get favorable reply to special request.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Service, achievement, the building of a solid base — these are emphasized. Taurus and another Libran are likely to be in picture. Health, shoes, improvement. Appetite returns. Be aware of nutritional requirements. Avoid "junk foods."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You speculate and land on your feet. Element of luck or timing rides beside you and smiles your way. Don't get a big head. Inexplicable forces pull your way and you don't really have much to do with it. Be gracious and grateful. And buy an expensive gift for member of opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study, scorpionic message. You make favorable impression on one who pulls purse strings. You can get money for research, investment or home improvement. Capricorn, cancer persons figure prominently. You deal from position of strength. Know it — act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You gain through fresh contacts with neighbors, relatives. Turn over new leaf. Laugh at your own follies. Approach one who battled with you — do so in charming manner. You'll be amazed at reception. Let bygones be bygones. Be civilized, sophisticated. Then you'll be held in very high esteem!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get windfall. Means what you earned comes your way in somewhat of a rush. Accent is on money, gain, profit, constructive results. Added recognition is due. However, avoid paying more than you should — fight tendency toward personal inflation. You will understand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You look impressive. People want to do favors for you in order to win your favor. Don't tempt more than you can deliver. Temptation is to say yes, yes and yes. Key to success is to aid those willing to help themselves. You will extricate yourself from dilemma. That's cause for celebration.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are musical, diplomatic, have sweet tooth, will find that September is your most important month of 1974. Taurus, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. Early Big Eight Schedule Tough For NU

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Kansas City, Mo. — In order for Nebraska to contend for the Big Eight Conference football championship this season the Cornhuskers will have to hurdle a couple of tough foes in their first two league games.

That was the conclusion drawn here Monday as the league coaches gave rundowns on 1974 prospects at the annual Kickoff Luncheon in the Century Ballroom of the Crown Center Hotel.

Those first two opponents will be Missouri, a team which ripped Nebraska by a point last season in Columbia, and Kansas, which tied the Cornhuskers for second place in the league.

Both coaches, Al Onofrio of the Tigers and Don Fambrough of the Jayhawks, are looking to achieve success this season and expect to do it with veteran defensive units rather than high scoring offensive teams.

"We have nine defensive starters back and we have the ingredients for a good team," Onofrio said. He also feels he has youngsters to fill in for the graduated defenders, cornerback John Moseley and nose man Hennis Burler.

Likewise, Kansas has a chance to have "the best defensive team since I've been at Kansas," according to Fambrough. The Jayhawks lost only three players on defense and figure to have more depth than a year ago when they tied Nebraska for second place in the conference.

"You can't win without defense," Fambrough said, a remark which echoed the sentiments of all the league coaches. "Our success last year was to the credit of the defense."

That's despite having quarterback David Jaynes, who led the Big Eight in total offense. Without Jaynes, Kansas will play a veer offense to take advantage of the abilities of QB replacement Scott McMichael.

That doesn't mean Kansas won't pass, but the emphasis will go to developing a good running game. "We'll continue to pass," Onofrio said, "but we'll emphasize running more. We have three fine receivers and McMichael has the tools to throw and run intelligently."

Oklahoma's No. 1

There was little question how the coaches feel about who's No. 1 in the league race. It's Oklahoma by a landslide, but it is agreed the Sooners won't be as tough a defensive team as it was last season.

"We had a super defense last year," said Sooner coach Barry Switzer. "The replacements won't play as well as the men we lost. It was a great feeling going into each game last year knowing the other team would score only one touchdown and that they'd have to have a great day to score two touchdowns."

Nebraska was one of those teams which didn't have a great day against the Sooners, not even getting one touchdown in a 27-0 loss.

"I feel Oklahoma has the most outstanding players," Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne said. "For instance, I don't feel we have a big-play player like Joe Washington. They definitely should be favored."

Writers feel Nebraska is the only team with any sort of realistic hope of knocking Oklahoma off the top of the conference standings, but Osborne doesn't accept that theory.

"It's not a foregone conclusion Nebraska will finish second," he said. "There are a great many teams capable of beating us. Yet, there is a legitimate chance we can win it as well."

Hastings Crushes Aamco, 8-1

Monday's Results

Hastings 8, Lincoln Aamco 1
North Platte 3, Omaha South Eagles 0
Omaha Roberts 4, Millard 0

Tuesday's Games

Millard v. Hastings, 5:30 p.m.
Omaha Roberts v. North Platte, 8 p.m.

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

Hastings — After playing two error-free games, the floodgates finally opened for Lincoln Aamco here Monday in the State Class A Junior Legion Baseball Tournament at Duncan Field.

Aamco, playing what coach Bill Fagler described as one of its flattest games of the season, yielded eight unearned runs in an 8-1 third round loss to Hastings, eliminating the Capital City entry from the tournament.

The Omaha South Eagles also were sidelined after dropping a 3-0 decision to North Platte with Randy Weigel pitching a 4-hitter and Vern Hiatt driving in all three North Platte runs. Omaha Roberts remained the only unbeaten team in the double elimination tourney with a 4-0 win over Millard.

"I guess we just lost our level of concentration," Fagler said in trying to explain the disappointing loss to the Cornhusker Legion League champions.

"It's a funny game," added Fagler. "Hastings only hit the ball hard once or twice, but we weren't ready. The first two games of the tournament, we had all nine guys moving when the ball was hit. Today, we had seven guys standing and one chasing.

"We were just flat all the way around," according to Fagler. "I couldn't even begin to add up the mental mistakes we made in addition to the errors."

In finishing its season with a 20-10 record, Aamco committed a whopping seven errors. "That's really discouraging," observed Fagler. "You don't mind being eliminated when you go out and play well."

Fagler admitted that the defensive roof caving in on Aamco could have been attributed to wet conditions, caused by scattered showers Monday afternoon.

"Sure it was a bad day to play, but Hastings had to play on it, too," Fagler said.

Hastings, in raising its season record to 27-18 and third win over Aamco after getting off to a poor 5-13 start, scored its first run in the first inning.

Jerry Donahue singled and eventually scored on Aamco shortstop Scott Votava's error. Hastings struck for another unearned run in the second when Jeff Kerr singled and eventually scored on Votava's second error.

Hastings padded the margin to 4-0 with another pair of unearned runs in the fifth as Brian Extrum and Jim Asbury, both aboard on singles, raced home on Votava's third error.

Although Aamco averted a shutout when Votava singled home John Ingram in the eighth inning, Hastings retaliated with four more unearned runs in the ninth to put the game handily out of reach.

Ingram was the ninth-inning target of a string of well-placed Hastings bunts. Ingram mis-handled two of the bunts and two others were infield singles.

"Hastings certainly doesn't overwhelm you, but they're deceiving and get the job done," says Fagler. "They bunt the ball well. There wasn't one they laid down that wasn't good."

Randy Marr went the route in pitching the Hastings victory. He checked Aamco on only four hits while striking out two and walking three.

"Again, we rapped the ball. But it always was right to someone," lamented Fagler, who has guided three teams to the state tourney in four years of coaching Legion ball in Lincoln.

Steen Services Set Thursday

Services for Melvin O. Steen, retired director of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, will be 11 a.m. Thursday at the Roper & Sons Chapel.

Steen died Monday in Lincoln at the age of 77.

He was a 50-year veteran of conservation and recreation programs. Besides his 14-year directorship of the Game and Parks Commission, he spent 14 years with the State of North Dakota, 10 with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and 12 with the Missouri Conservation Commission.

Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn.

He retired from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission April 22, 1970.

One week earlier, he was honored in a "Mel Steen Day" called by then-governor Norbert T. Tiemann.

After retirement, he worked as a lobbyist and consultant for the Devils Nest Land Development Co., a recreation area on the Lewis and Clark Lake in Northeast Nebraska.

The promotion slogan, "Nebraskaland, where the West begins," started under Steen's administration.

In a Sunday Journal and Star interview with Steen shortly before his retirement, he included in a list of accomplishments: the "Chain of Lakes" and wayside parks along Interstate 80, the Salt Valley lakes, Ft. Kearney restoration and the Aerospace Museum at Offutt Field near Omaha.

He said he felt his greatest accomplishment was "awakening the people of the state to pride in themselves and in the state itself."

"We live in a part of the land that is not yet totally despoiled," he once told Nebraskans.

Steen was born in Pierce County, N.D. He graduated from the Knox, N.D., high school and was a member of the Nebraska Water Pollution Control Council, Nebraska Soil and Water Conservation Commission, National Wildlife Federation and the Izaak Walton League.

He once said of ecology: "Our civilization is on a collision course with Mother Nature. And to save ourselves from disaster we must... control our population and we must husband our twin resources of land and water..."

"In nature there is no waste. She re-cycles everything. We must emulate Mother Nature..."

Steen received a Certificate of Public Service from the U.S. Corps of Engineers and an Eyes on Nebraska award in 1970.

He received a Distinguished Service Award from the Nebraska Recreation and Park Association in 1971.

Willard Barbee became Game and Parks commission director when Steen retired.

Sports Notes

General manager Bob Schefling of the New York Mets said a report that he'll retire at the end of the current season is premature, although he'll give up the general managership and accept another position with the club.

Van Patrick, who announced Notre Dame and Detroit Lions football on the radio, received approval to resume his broadcast schedule following surgery last April for cancer.

Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese and wide receiver Ron Sellers, Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw and Los Angeles Rams all-pro quarterback John Hadl, co-captain Joe Scibelli and wide receiver Jack Snow crossed the picket lines and joined their respective training camps.

The Iowa State Athletic Council is not a government body and not subject to Iowa's open meetings law according to an Iowa district court ruling.

The St. Louis Cardinals announced they have purchased outfielder Richie Scheinblum from the Kansas City Royals and sent him to their Tulsa farm club.

Staehr Not Worried About Lack Of Size

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Fremont — Keith Staehr, head coach for the North Shrine Bowl squad, kept one coaching philosophy firmly implanted in his mind Monday as his charges opened two-week long drills here at Midland College in preparation for the August 17 clash.

"We're not worried about size," the Kimball High School coach noted. "If a kid is tough enough, he's big enough."

Staehr, who was a late replacement for Lexington's Noel Martin as head coach for the North, has reason to pull that particular piece of philosophy out of his head.

The North is considerably smaller than the South with just 10 players weighing 200 pounds or more contrasting the South's 17 at 200-plus.

The North is not without big men, however. Roger Wacholtz, from last year's Sunday Journal and Star Class C state champion Plainview, weighed a hefty 257 pounds before Monday's workout.

"Wacholtz isn't fat," Staehr said. "We may be lighter than the South, but we don't have many bellies showing. These guys are pretty much straight up and down. They look like they're in pretty good condition."

Staehr hopes to be able to offset some of the size disadvantage with speed. "If the 40 times the coaches turned in for the kids are right," he said, "we'll have exceptional speed. We have quite a few that have turned in 4.7 or better. We'll see after we clock them."

Staehr indicated the North will try to isolate its speed outside, using variations of the T-formation. Proven speed comes in the form of Mike Kinney of Bassett and Mike Thompson from Omaha Holy Name. Both won class gold medals in the 100 yard dash at the state track meet last spring.

Kinney took Class C and overall honors with a :09.6 clocking while Thompson, a triple gold winner in 1972, won the Class B Century in :09.7.

After loosening up drills Monday, the North begins three-day practices Tuesday with workouts scheduled for 8 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. at Midland's practice field.

A controlled scrimmage is set for either Wednesday or Thursday, depending on the progress shown in learning the new system, according to Staehr.

Both teams will fly to Minneapolis Saturday to the Twin Cities Unit of the Shrine Hospital for Crippled and Burned Children.

The North will return to Fremont for a full game type scrimmage Sunday at 2 p.m.

"The scrimmage will be a learning situation," Staehr said. "We'll be working against the offense and defense we expect to see from the South. We aren't going to try to bang anybody up, but we want to be able to hit as much as possible without hurting anyone. We want the kids to hit, and I think they want to hit."

Staehr, who played in the 1964 Shrine Bowl, is just as excited about coaching in the game. "I was sitting down by the Platte River the other night, and there was an autumn chill in the air," he said of his anticipation. "I was hit by football fever."

Not Much Expected In Talks

Washington (AP) — The National Football League players and club owners return to the bargaining table with a federal mediator Tuesday, but indications are that little has taken place to force either side to change positions.

Despite the poor attendance at the first weekend of exhibition games, a spokesman for the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining agent, said Monday the group is not very optimistic that an agreement can be reached to resolve the labor dispute and end the 36-day strike.

"All the freedom demands remain as they were," said Terry Bledsoe, management spokesman. "We're coming down to Washington without any great expectations."

On the other hand, Ed Garvey, executive director of the union, said the association is optimistic that a new contract can be negotiated in the wake of the weekend's activities.

Garvey said the owners have put "a lot of pressure on the players to report to camp but when they get the word about our meeting here Sunday, I think they are going to come to the table and bargain in good faith."

"When they hear the reports, they will have to realize how long the strike could last," said Garvey.

Some 60 players, including the team representatives from every club except Dallas, met in Washington for five hours and voted unanimously to retain their strong stand against the owners. Garvey said the Cowboys' representative, John Niland, missed his plane.

Negotiations, which began on March 16 when the players submitted their demands, broke down last Thursday and were recessed until Tuesday because chief federal mediator W. J. Usery Jr. said an agreement couldn't be consummated then.

Usery asked both the players and owners to reevaluate their positions and "be prepared to bargain in good faith."

The union alleges that it has drastically modified its demands and accused the owners of failing to bargain in good faith, citing the fact that only two, Wellington Mara of New York and Art Modell of Cleveland, were present at the meetings last week.

The owners said, however, that Mara is chairman of the council and Modell was head of the finance committee and both have full authority to bargain.

"We were under pretty severe attack last weekend," said Bledsoe, "and it was important for them the other owners to handle club business. The members present were in constant touch with the other members of the committee."

The crux of the labor dispute is the so-called freedom demands by the players which call for the elimination of the reserve and option clauses and a limit on the authority of commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Legion To Pay For Expenses Of Swingers

The Lincoln Swingers girls softball team will be able to attend the National Amateur Girls' Softball Championships in Freeport, Tex. after all.

The American Legion Post No. 3 has agreed to pay the team's expenses so the 19-member squad can represent Nebraska in the national tournament.

Coach Dick Reinmiller's team, which earlier won the Lincoln city title and the Nebraska title, did not have enough money to attend the nationals.

When the American Legion Post No. 3 heard of their plight, they decided to pay the team's expenses, according to a Legion spokesman.

The national meet, running Friday through Sunday, has attracted teams representing more than 40 states.

Early Big Eight Schedule Tough For NU

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Kansas City, Mo. — In order for Nebraska to contend for the Big Eight Conference football championship this season the Cornhuskers will have to hurdle a couple of tough foes in their first two league games.

That was the conclusion drawn here Monday as the league coaches gave rundowns on 1974 prospects at the annual Kickoff Luncheon in the Century Ballroom of the Crown Center Hotel.

Those first two opponents will be Missouri, a team which nipped Nebraska by a point last season in Columbia, and Kansas, which tied the Cornhuskers for second place in the league.

Both coaches, Al Onofrio of the Tigers and Don Fambrough of the Jayhawks, are looking to achieve success this season and expect to do it with veteran defensive units rather than high scoring offensive teams.

"We have nine defensive starters back and we have the ingredients for a good team," Onofrio said. He also feels he has youngsters to fill in for the graduated defenders, cornerback John Moseley and nose man Heris Burler.

Likewise, Kansas has a chance to have "the best defensive team since I've been at Kansas," according to Fambrough. The Jayhawks lost only three players on defense and figure to have more depth than a year ago when they tied Nebraska for second place in the conference.

"You can't win without defense," Fambrough said, a remark which echoed the sentiments of all the league coaches. "Our success last year was to the credit of the defense."

That's despite having quarterback David Jaynes, who led the Big Eight in total offense. Without Jaynes, Kansas will play a veer offense to take advantage of the abilities of QB replacement Scott McMichael.

That doesn't mean Kanas won't pass, but the emphasis will go to developing a good running game. "We'll continue to pass," Onofrio said, "but we'll emphasize running more. We have three fine receivers and McMichael has the tools to throw and run intelligently."

Oklahoma's No. 1

There was little question how the coaches feel about who's No. 1 in the league race. It's Oklahoma by a landslide, but it is agreed the Sooners won't be as tough a defensive team as it was last season.

"We had a super defense last year," said Sooner coach Barry Switzer. "The replacements won't play as well as the men we lost. It was a great feeling going into each game last year knowing the other team would score only one touchdown and that they'd have to have a great day to score two touchdowns."

Nebraska was one of those teams which didn't have a great day against the Sooners, not even getting one touchdown in a 27-0 loss.

"I feel Oklahoma has the most outstanding players," Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne said. "For instance, I don't feel we have a big-play player like Joe Washington. They definitely should be favored."

Writers feel Nebraska is the only team with any sort of realistic hope of knocking Oklahoma off the top of the conference standings, but Osborne doesn't accept that theory.

"It's not a foregone conclusion Nebraska will finish second," he said. "There are a great many teams capable of beating us. Yet, there is a legitimate chance we can win it all well."

South Shrine Morale High

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

Crete — Team morale at the opening of the South Shrine Bowl football training camp at Doane College here Monday may have been at one of its all-time highs.

The optimistic attitude can be traced, for the most part, to head coach Milt Tenopir's Sunday night announcement that he plans to direct a less rigid camp than normal.

"This should be a fun situation. We're not here trying to make the players regret that they came here for two weeks," Tenopir said.

"We're not going into these practice sessions with the idea of finding out how tough the players are," he added. "That's what we looked at films for."

"We took a little survey last night and 29 of the 33 players here plan to go out for college football," acknowledged Tenopir. "That's a fantastic ratio."

"We're not planning a bunch of head-knocking sessions to tell who can pop. We'll be able to tell," Tenopir said. "We're not here to teach technique either. We intend to stress assignments. They should use the technique their high school coaches taught them."

Tenopir's decision to run a more relaxed camp is not a rash decision. He was head coach for the North squad in the annual Colorado Coaches All-Star Football Game at Pueblo in 1968.

At the time, he was coaching at Haxtun, Colo., where he tutored such players as former all-American Colorado defensive end Bill Brundige, now a starter on the NFL Washington Redskins, and current Nebraska linebacker John Starkebaum.

Tenopir is former McCook head coach and athletic director, who yielded those duties last spring to accept a graduate assistant post to help coach Nebraska's football team this fall while doing post-graduate work.

He was an assistant Shrine Bowl coach for the South team in 1972. His past all-star coaching experience was instrumental in his philosophy for this year's camp.

"We still plan to work out three times a day. But it's mostly the John McKay philosophy — a lot of air dummy defense," offered Tenopir.

"We still have to get ready to play," he said. "We just don't want to work to the point where we don't enjoy it. Those who didn't report in shape know it and we will, too. We expect them to run on their own after practice."

Tenopir plans practices on Doane's Simon Field at 9:30 a.m., 3:30 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. He indicated that the South will play a controlled scrimmage in its Thursday afternoon workout.

Omaha Westside's Pat Gibbons reported as the heaviest player in the South camp. He's 5-11 and 253½ pounds. Other "heavyweights" included Omaha South's Roger Wilkins (241½) and Erhard Havranek (241) and Omaha Bryan's Charles Covey (240).

Bellevue's Randy Sutton reported as the lightest player in camp. He's 5-10½ and 150. Omaha South's Darrell Walton recorded the fastest 40-yard dash time (.046).

Staehr Not Worried About Lack Of Size

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Fremont — Keith Staehr, head coach for the North Shrine Bowl squad, kept one coaching philosophy firmly implanted in his mind Monday as his charges opened two-week long drills here at Midland College in preparation for the August 17 clash.

"We're not worried about size," the Kimball High School coach noted. "If a kid is tough enough, he's big enough."

Staehr, who was a late replacement for Lexington's Noel Martin as head coach for the North, has reason to pull that particular piece of philosophy out of his head.

The North is considerably smaller than the South with just 10 players weighing 200 pounds or more contrasting the South's 17 at 200-plus.

The North is not without big men, however. Roger Wacholtz, from last year's Sunday Journal and Star Class C state champion Plainview, weighed a hefty 257 pounds before Monday's workout.

"Wacholtz isn't fat," Staehr said. "We may be lighter than the South, but we don't have many bellies showing. These guys are pretty much straight up and down. They look like they're in pretty good condition."

Staehr hopes to be able to offset some of the size disadvantage with speed. "If the 40 times the coaches turned in for the kids are right," he said, "we'll have exceptional speed. We have quite a few that have turned in 4.7 or better. We'll see after we clock them."

Staehr indicated the North will try to isolate its speed outside, using variations of the T-formation. Proven speed comes in the form of Mike Kinney of Bassett and Mike Thompson from Omaha Holy Name. Both won class gold medals in the 100 yard dash at the state track meet last spring.

Kinney took Class C and overall honors with a .09.6 clocking while Thompson, a triple gold winner in 1972, won the Class B Century in .09.7.

After loosening up drills Monday, the North begins three-a-day practices Tuesday with workouts scheduled for 8 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. at Midland's practice field.

A controlled scrimmage is set for either Wednesday or Thursday, depending on the progress shown in learning the new system, according to Staehr.

Hastings — After playing two error-free games, the floodgates finally opened for Lincoln Aamco here Monday in the State Class A Junior Legion Baseball Tournament at Duncan Field.

Aamco, playing what coach Bill Fagler described as one of its flattest games of the season, yielded eight unearned runs in an 8-1 third round loss to Hastings, eliminating the Capital City entry from the tournament.

The Omaha South Eagles also were sidelined after dropping a 3-0 decision to North Platte with Randy Weigel pitching a 4-hitter and Vern Hiatt driving in all three North Platte runs. Omaha Roberts remained the only unbeaten team in the double elimination tourney with a 4-0 win over Millard.

"I guess we just lost our level of concentration," Fagler said in trying to explain the disappointing loss to the Cornhusker Legion League champions.

"It's a funny game," added Fagler. "Hastings only hit the ball hard once or twice, but we weren't ready. The first two games of the tournament, we had all nine guys moving when the ball was hit. Today, we had seven guys standing and one chasing.

"We were just flat all the way around," according to Fagler. "I couldn't even begin to add up the mental mistakes we made in addition to the errors."

In finishing its season with a 20-10 record, Aamco committed a whopping seven errors. "That's really discouraging," observed Fagler. "You don't mind being eliminated when you go out and play well."

Fagler admitted that the defensive roof caving in on Aamco could have been attributed to wet conditions, caused by scattered showers Monday afternoon.

"Sure it was a bad day to play, but Hastings had to play on it, too," Fagler said.

Hastings, in raising its season record to 27-18 and third win over Aamco after getting off to a poor 5-13 start, scored its first run in the first inning.

Jerry Donahue singled and eventually scored on Aamco shortstop Scott Votava's error. Hastings struck for another unearned run in the second when Jeff Kerr singled and eventually scored on Votava's second error.

Hastings padded the margin to 4-0 with another pair of unearned runs in the fifth as Brian Extrum and Jim Asbury, both aboard on singles, raced home on Votava's third error.

Although Aamco averted a shutout when Votava singled home John Ingram in the eighth inning, Hastings retaliated with four more unearned runs in the ninth to put the game handily out of reach.

Ingram was the ninth-inning target of a string of well-placed Hastings bunts. Ingram mis-handled two of the bunts and two others were infield singles.

"Hastings certainly doesn't overwhelm you, but they're deceiving and get the job done," says Fagler. "They bunt the ball well. There wasn't one they laid down that wasn't good."

Randy Marr went the route in pitching the Hastings victory. He checked Aamco on only four hits while striking out two and walking three.

"Again, we rapped the ball. But it always was right to someone," lamented Fagler, who has guided three teams to the state tourney in four years of coaching Legion ball in Lincoln.

General manager Bob Schefing of the New York Mets said a report that he'll retire at the end of the current season is premature, although he'll give up the general managership and accept another position with the club.

Van Patrick, who announced Notre Dame and Detroit Lions football on the radio, received approval to resume his broadcast schedule following surgery last April for cancer.

Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese and wide receiver Ron Sellers, Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw and Los Angeles Rams all-pro quarterback John Hadl, co-captain Joe Seibelli and wide receiver Jack Snow crossed the picket lines and joined their respective training camps.

The Iowa State Athletic Council is not a government body and not subject to Iowa's open meetings law according to an Iowa district court ruling.

The St. Louis Cardinals announced they have purchased outfielder Richie Scheinblum from the Kansas City Royals and sent him to their Tulsa farm club.

Steen Services Set Thursday

Services for Melvin O. Steen, retired director of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, will be 11 a.m. Thursday at the Roper & Sons Chapel.

Steen died Monday in Lincoln at the age of 77.

He was a 50-year veteran of conservation and recreation programs. Besides his 14-year directorship of the Game and Parks Commission, he spent 14 years with the State of North Dakota, 10 with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and 12 with the Missouri Conservation Commission.

He retired from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission April 22, 1970.

One week earlier, he was honored in a "Mel Steen Day" called by then-governor Norbert T. Tiemann.

After retirement, he worked as a lobbyist and consultant for the Devils Nest Land Development Co., a recreation area on the Lewis and Clark Lake in Northeast Nebraska.

The promotion slogan, "Nebraskaland, where the West begins," started under Steen's administration.

In a Sunday Journal and Star interview with Steen shortly before his retirement, he included in a list of accomplishments: the "Chain of Lakes" and wayside parks along Interstate 80, the Salt Valley lakes, Ft. Kearney restoration and the Aerospace Museum at Offutt Field near Omaha.

He said he felt his greatest accomplishment was "awakening the people of the state to pride in themselves and in the state itself."

"We live in a part of the land that is not yet totally despoiled," he once told Nebraskans.

Steen was born in Pierce County, N.D. He graduated from the Knox, N.D., high school and

Mel Steen

Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn.

Steen was a member of the Nebraska Water Pollution Control Council, Nebraska Soil and Water Conservation Commission, National Wildlife Federation and the Izaak Walton League.

He once said of ecology:

"Our civilization is on a collision course with Mother Nature. And to save ourselves from disaster we must... control our population and we must husband our twin resources of land and water..."

"In nature there is no waste. She re-cycles everything. We must emulate Mother Nature..."

Steen received a Certificate of Public Service from the U.S. Corps of Engineers and an Eyes on Nebraska award in 1970.

He received a Distinguished Service Award from the Nebraska Recreation and Park Association in 1971.

Willard Barbee became Game and Parks commission director when Steen retired.

Sellick, Marek Remember Huskers

Kansas City, Mo. — Jeff Sellick, Minnesota center, and Billy Marke, Wisconsin tailback, remember the Nebraska Cornhuskers well and respect them as a result of their experiences in games last season.

So does Wisconsin coach John Jardine, but if he had his way he "wouldn't schedule those kind of people," at least not until a winning attitude is established by his Badgers.

"It is most important to believe you can win," Jardine said last Friday at the Big Ten Conference's annual kickoff gathering in Chicago. "We stood around hoping we could hold the lead against Nebraska last season. The players were saying, 'Gee, we're winning' instead of working hard to hold the lead."

For this reason, Jardine is going to stress the psychological approach to football this fall. He doesn't want his team to go in awed or scared against any team. "We want the players thinking they're as good as the opponents," he said.

"Last year's game will help us when Nebraska comes to Madison," Marek believes. "Now we know we can beat them because of that experience, but we need to have a good attitude."

Marek almost single-handedly pulled what would have been an upset of gigantic proportions with his strong running, which was Jardine's game plan.

"They were so quick and Wisconsin was bigger," Marek said. "So we tried to move them out and run inside. Nebraska had to come out passing."

'Loss Tough To Take'

Marek said the loss was "a tough one to take" and Jardine described the effect on his squad when he said "after the game it was as sad a locker room as I've ever been in."

It was the third consecutive week Wisconsin had lost heart-breakers — by one point to Purdue, three points to Colorado and four to Nebraska. The rematch with the Huskers, incidentally, will be played in Madison on Sept. 21 and will be regionally televised.

Sellick, who had the unenviable task of going against Husker middle guard John Bell in Minnesota's 49-7 loss to Nebraska, praised Nebraska's defensive unit for its success in stopping the Gophers' veer-T offense.

"They slanted every time and seemed to know where we were running right away," Sellick said. In the veer offense you hope the defense guesses wrong one out of three times, but Nebraska was right all the time."

A halftime adjustment helped Minnesota after "they killed us" in the first half, Sellick said. The Gophers switched to what he called "scoop blocking" in the second half "and we did a whole lot better."

Instead of the center blocking the middle guard, the offensive guard got Bell and Sellick went to block the linebacker.

"They were very well coached," Sellick said. "And their quickness hurt a bug team like Minnesota." Gopher squads have traditionally been strong and lumbering and most times slow.

Minnesota, which comes to Lincoln for the re-match on Oct. 5, will have about the same offensive ability as it had last year, but the defense will be improved, Sellick said and Coach Cal Stoll concurred.

"Tony Dungy really improved this spring," Sellick said of the Gopher quarterback. "He took command and gave us leadership."

GI Wins Midget Title

YORK, Neb. (AP)—Doug Dawson, who pitched a no-hitter in Grand Island's opening tournament victory, squelched a Columbus Blues rally in relief Monday to lead his team to a 5-2 victory in the championship game of the State Class A Midget American Legion Baseball tournament.

Dawson entered the game with one out and a man on third in the bottom of the sixth and struck out John Fischer and Brian Poutch to end the rally.

He relieved Jay Lenstrom who gave up a run in the first inning and then handcuffed the Blues until the shaky sixth.

Lenstrom also led the offense, singling in the third and scoring on another single and a two-base throwing error.

Lenstrom singled across Bob Jussel in the fourth after Jussel gained second on a fielder's choice and a wild pitch.

Grand Island scored twice more in the seventh on two singles and two Columbus errors.

Tim Scott, Grand Island second baseman, got three hits out of four at bats.

Grand Island closed the season with a 22-5 record and was regular season champion in the Cornhusker League. The Columbus Blues finished 19-14.

Sprint Champs Tuesday

Popular former Lincoln sprint car driver Joe Saldana is expected to be on hand for the spring car championships at Midwest Speedway Tuesday night.

Promoter Gary Swenson, who says he is expecting one of the finest fields ever in this area, revealed that Saldana, who now lives in an Indianapolis suburb, Brownburg, has indicated his intentions to be here.

Swenson also noted that the first three finishers in Knoxville, Iowa's Sunday pre-National championships jamboree are also expected to be here. They include Jerry McClung, who won Sunday, Eddie Leavitt and current Midwest point leader Dick Sutcliffe.

In addition, last week's Midwest winner, Jan Opperman of Beaver Crossing, who finished eighth Sunday in the Purolator 500 NASCAR stock car race at Pocono Raceway in Pennsylvania, will be here.

In all, Swenson said that he had received 42 entries so far and added that several local drivers had not signed up yet and are expected to do so at the gate Tuesday night.

A purse of $4,000 plus will be offered for the races which get underway at 7:30 p.m. with time trials. The highlight of the evening will be the 50-lap main event.

Swenson said that he had moved the races up to Tuesday night so as to not conflict with any other track's sprint car championships. As a result there will be no sprint car racing locally on Wednesday night.

Also on tap Tuesday night, as the auto racing scene picks up momentum this week, is a stock car championship at the Gage County Fairgrounds in Beatrice.

Promoter Paul Saenz said he is expecting most of the top Lincoln drivers as well as some drivers from the Omaha area. A purse of $1,600 is being offered for the races which begin at 8 p.m.

Johnny's Set For Tourney

Nebraska's semi-pro baseball champion Johnny's of Lincoln, received word Monday morning that it had been selected to play in the National Baseball Congress Tournament in Wichita, Kan.

Manager John Arkfield said his club would meet Georgia at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday night in the double-elimination tournament.

Arkfield indicated Larry Abel, a left-hander from Central City, would be his starting pitcher. Abel won four games for Johnny's during the Nebraska state tournament which was held in Genoa.

Arkfield said the national office decided to extend an invitation to the Nebraska entry after state tournaments in Michigan and North Carolina were delayed by rain, thus opening two spots in the 32-team field.

Sellick, Marek Remember Huskers

Kansas City, Mo. — Jeff Sellick, Minnesota center, and Billy Marke, Wisconsin tailback, remember the Nebraska Cornhuskers well and respect them as a result of their experiences in games last season.

So does Wisconsin coach John Jardine, but if he had his way he "wouldn't schedule those kind of people," at least not until a winning attitude is established by his Badgers.

"It is most important to believe you can win," Jardine said last Friday at the Big Ten Conference's annual kickoff gathering in Chicago. "We stood around hoping we could hold the lead against Nebraska last season. The players were saying, 'Gee, we're winning' instead of working hard to hold the lead."

For this reason, Jardine is going to stress the psychological approach to football this fall. He doesn't want his team to go in awed or scared against any team. "We want the players thinking they're as good as the opponents," he said.

"Last year's game will help us when Nebraska comes to Madison," Marek believes. "Now we know we can beat them because of that experience, but we need to have a good attitude."

Marek almost single-handedly pulled what would have been an upset of gigantic proportions with his strong running, which was Jardine's game plan.

"They were so quick and Wisconsin was bigger," Marek said. "So we tried to move them out and run inside. Nebraska had to come out passing."

'Loss Tough To Take'

Marek said the loss was "a tough one to take" and Jardine described the effect on his squad when he said "after the game it was as sad a locker room as I've ever been in."

It was the third consecutive week Wisconsin had lost heart-breakers — by one point to Purdue, three points to Colorado and four to Nebraska. The rematch with the Huskers, incidentally, will be played in Madison on Sept. 21 and will be regionally televised.

Sellick, who had the unenviable task of going against Husker middle guard John Bell in Minnesota's 48-7 loss to Nebraska, praised Nebraska's defensive unit for its success in stopping the Gophers' veer-T offense.

"They slanted every time and seemed to know where we were running right away," Sellick said. In the veer offense you hope the defense guesses wrong one out of three times, but Nebraska was right all the time."

A halftime adjustment helped Minnesota after "they killed us" in the first half, Sellick said. The Gophers switched to what he called "scoop blocking" in the second half "and we did a whole lot better."

Instead of the center blocking the middle guard, the offensive guard got Bell and Sellick went to block the linebacker.

"They were very well coached," Sellick said. "And their quickness hurt a big team like Minnesota." Gopher squads have traditionally been strong and lumbering and most times slow.

Minnesota, which comes to Lincoln for the re-match on Oct. 5, will have about the same offensive ability as it had last year, but the defense will be improved, Sellick said and Coach Cal Stoll concurred.

"Tony Dungy really improved this spring," Sellick said of the Gopher quarterback. "He took command and gave us leadership."

GI Wins Midget Title

YORK, Neb. (AP)—Doug Dawson, who pitched a no-hitter in Grand Island's opening tournament victory, squelched a Columbus Blues rally in relief Monday to lead his team to a 5-2 victory in the championship game of the State Class A Midget American Legion Baseball tournament.

Dawson entered the game with one out and a man on third in the bottom of the sixth and struck out John Fischer and Brian Fouch to end the rally.

He relieved Jay Lenstrom who gave up a run in the first inning and then handcuffed the Blues until the shaky sixth.

Lenstrom also led the offense, singling in the third and scoring on another single and a two-base throwing error.

Lenstrom singled across Bob Jussel in the fourth after Jussel gained second on a fielder's choice and a wild pitch.

Grand Island scored twice more in the seventh on two singles and two Columbus errors.

Tim Scott, Grand Island second baseman, got three hits out of four at bats.

Grand Island closed the season with a 22-5 record and was regular season champion in the Cornhusker League. The Columbus Blues finished 19-14.

Grand Island 002 100 2-5 11 3 Columbus 001 0-2 7 3 Lenstrom, Dawson (6) and Frei, Schumacher and Abbott.

Sprint Champs Tuesday

Popular former Lincoln sprint car driver Joe Saldana is expected to be on hand for the spring car championships at Midwest Speedway Tuesday night.

Promoter Gary Swenson, who says he is expecting one of the finest fields ever in this area, revealed that Saldana, who now lives in an Indianapolis suburb, Brownburg, has indicated his intentions to be here.

Swenson also noted that the first three finishers in Knoxville, Iowa's Sunday pre-National championships jamboree are also expected to be here. They include Jerry McClung, who won Sunday, Eddie Leavitt and current Midwest point leader Dick Sutcliffe.

In addition, last week's Midwest winner, Jan Opperman of Beaver Crossing, who finished eighth Sunday in the Purolator 500 NASCAR stock car race at Pocono Raceway in Pennsylvania, will be here.

In all, Swenson said that he had received 42 entries so far and added that several local drivers had not signed up yet and are expected to do so at the gate Tuesday night.

A purse of $4,000 plus will be offered for the races which get underway at 7:30 p.m. with time trials. The highlight of the evening will be the 50-lap main event.

Swenson said that he had moved the races up to Tuesday night so as to not conflict with any other track's sprint car championships. As a result there will be no sprint car racing locally on Wednesday night.

Also on tap Tuesday night, as the auto racing scene picks up momentum this week, is a stock car championship at the Gage County Fairgrounds in Beatrice. Promoter Paul Saenz said he is expecting most of the top Lincoln drivers as well as some drivers from the Omaha area. A purse of $1,600 is being offered for the races which begin at 8 p.m.

Johnny's Set For Tourney

Nebraska's semi-pro baseball champion Johnny's of Lincoln, received word Monday morning that it had been selected to play in the National Baseball Congress Tournament in Wichita, Kan.

Manager John Arkfield said his club would meet Georgia at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday night in the double-elimination tournament.

Arkfield indicated Larry Abel, a left-hander from Central City, would be his starting pitcher. Abel won four games for Johnny's during the Nebraska state tournament which was held in Genoa.

Arkfield said the national office decided to extend an invitation to the Nebraska entry after state tournaments in Michigan and North Carolina were delayed by rain, thus opening two spots in the 32-team field.

Major Leagues Form Group

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Seventeen major league baseball teams have formed a scouting bureau in an effort to pool efforts to obtain new talent, it was announced Monday.

James A. Wilson resigned as vice president and director of baseball operations for the Milwaukee Brewers to head the new organization. Donald F. Pries, who resigned as assistant to the general manager of the Baltimore Orioles, will be assistant director.

The Bureau's headquarters will be located in Southern California and scouting reports are to be available for the 1975 free agent draft.

THE PADDOCK

Destined For Second?

While others scorn second-place, Wayne Anderson has become a "second-place institution."

"No, I really don't have a complex about it anymore. When it first started I guess I did, but now it's more of a joke," said the jockey who is nicknamed "Avis" after the rental car firm since he is perennially second in the standings on the outstate Nebraska circuit.

"I think it really started at Atokad in 1970. I was second in the standings and the jockey title went down to the last race on the last day between Fred Ecoffey and me," he recalled. "We both were riding and it was a mile and 5.8ths, I think. My horse was in front the whole way and then all of a sudden, he bolted to the outside.

"Fred ended up winning that race and the 'title,'" the popular rider said. "Since then I've been second at Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad a lot of times."

Anderson, who also competes at Sportsman's Park near Chicago each year, takes a positive approach towards second-place.

"If I am going to be in second, then I'd much rather be second each time, than first once and then last," he said. "I've won over 100 races each of the last three years."

Fatherly Influence

Although Anderson began riding in 1966 at Park Jefferson and in Colorado, he was hesitant about riding in Nebraska. The reason?

His father is Irv Anderson, a steward at Fonner Park, Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad and a paddock judge at Ak-Sar-Ben. Irv was also one of the country's leading riders when he rode for the famed Calumet Farms during his jockey career.

Persons would always say Wayne was favored because his father was an official. Finally, the younger Anderson decided to start riding in Nebraska.

"At first, I was afraid what people would say," he admits. "Everyone knew Irv was my dad. But now it usually works the other way. You know he has to be a little harder on you or people will accuse you. I've had my share of days (suspended) and fines."

Anderson first received instructions on galloping horses from veteran trainer and owner Jim McCumber. Officials are not allowed to gallop horses, so McCumber gave Anderson his first instructions on sitting on horses.

"Irv had me looking at films all the time," Wayne said. "I'm not really compared to Irv very much. I'm just satisfied with myself. I do wish I could have seen him (Irv) ride."

The 27-year-old rider hopes to continue riding until he's a liability to the horses. That doesn't mean that he spends 12 months a year working.

He returns to his home in Grand Island soon after Thanksgiving each year and just "take it easy for the winter. "I spend a lot of time hunting around Sutton for coyotes, pheasants, quail or whatever's in season," he said. "I think that that's one thing I didn't learn from Irv — hunting."

Maybe not in all cases, second-place is as good as first, but Wayne Anderson is quite a success at "second-place."

House Endorses Placid's Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives voted Monday, 382 to 4, to endorse the application of Lake Placid, N. Y., to be the site of the 1980 Olympic Winter Games.

The resolution also pledges cooperation and support of the games.

The House, however, added to the resolution as previously passed by the Senate a proviso that Olympic activities not conflict with present laws and regulations respecting Adirondack Park.

The measure goes back to the Senate for consideration of this amendment.

No action by the President is required.

Kearney Angler Wins Contest

Pierre, S.D. (UPI) — A Kearney, Neb., angler has walked off with the largest game fish at the annual South Dakota Spearfishing Contest held at the Oahe Reservoir.

Larry Fogleman took the top honor with a 6.1 pound northern pike. Another Nebraskan, Jack Miettinen of North Platte, speared a 5.7 pound walleyed pike to take runnerup honors.

Twenty-eight men's teams and seven women's teams from the Dakotas as well as Nebraska and Iowa competed in the spearfishing contest.

Chiefs Rap Lions, 20-12

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rookie Dave Jaynes, playing quarterback while striking Kansas City veterans picked the stadium, threw a 46-yard touchdown strike on his first aerial effort and guided the Chiefs to a 20-12 National Football League exhibition victory over Detroit Monday night.

The All-American from Kansas found Craig Clark at the 10 and the rookie from Utah State ripped into the end zone. The play capped a 76-yard, six-play drive with the opening kickoff.

A crowd of 35,521, some 3,695 shy of the opening crowd last season, watched the contest, played almost exclusively with rookies and free agents because of the NFL Players Association's feud with the NFL owners. Each team had only four veterans.

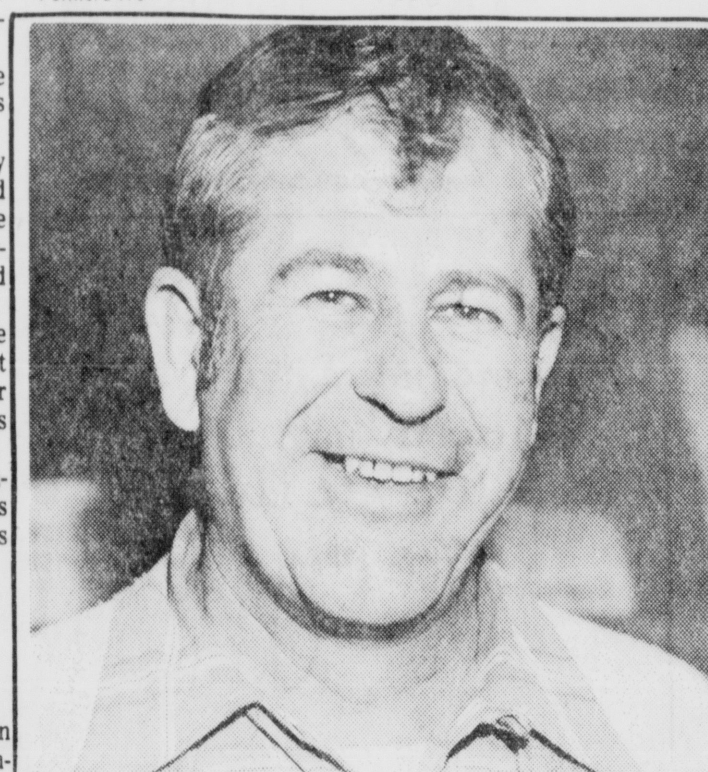

Another 4,000 were given refunds at their request.

Before the half ended, Robert Currier of Puget Sound kicked a 22-yard field goal and Tony Grisby of Bethune-Cookman skirled in for seven yards.

FIRE CALLS

Firefighters Refused Reopening Of Pay Talks

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Rank and file city employees want 10%, the bus drivers want 25% and the firefighters want the chance to discuss the situation.

That's what city lawmakers were told Monday during a hearing on a proposed cost of living hike of 7 1/2% for all city workers.

Although formal action on the ordinance is scheduled for next week, the majority of the council refused to reopen labor negotiations with the firefighters union. The vote was 5-2.

Council members Dick Baker, Sue Bailey, Helen Boosalis, Steve Cook and Bob Sikyta went along with Personnel Director Walt Mitchell's recommendation not to re-open the talks. Max Denney and John Robinson disagreed.

Under a two-year contract signed by the firefighters last year, the officers received 5% last year and will receive 7 1/2% this year.

The city negotiating team, headed by Mitchell, did reopen talks with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, who also had signed a two-year contract.

Mitchell explained that there is no "need" to re-open negotiations with the firefighters since Lincoln salaries ranked sixth in a study of 14 comparably sized Midwestern cities.

Hobart Boswell, president of the union, contended that if the city grants a 10% increase to other city employees, firefighters will be receiving less of an increase.

10% Hike Sought

The 10% hike is being requested by the City Employees Association, a non-union organization representing some 300 City Hall workers.

CEA President Jim Visger noted that the city will be forced to pay increases of up to 25% for cars, 102% for paint and 40% for aluminum.

"Without these employees, what good are all these other commodities?" he asked.

While CEA is requesting a 10% increase, Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) drivers are putting in for 25%.

Joe Gray, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1293, reported that the group will be requesting a 25% increase when it meets with the city negotiating team for the first time this week.

Gray contended that a cutback in service two years ago and a further slash in service during the fuel crisis this winter forced drivers to lose money.

Reprimand

Mitchell reprimanded the union for appearing before the council first.

"This is not in the spirit of the proper approach to negotiations," the personnel director stated.

He defended the 7 1/2% increase saying, "We have moved with the economy."

Before the council acts on the pay ordinance, it is expected that the lawmakers will request the Personnel Board to reconvene in an attempt to reach a majority recommendation on the issue.

At a special meeting last week, the board voted 2-1 to recommend the 7 1/2% cost of living hike. Two members of the five-member panel were absent, however. Three votes are needed to refer a recommendation on to the council.

And in a related issue the council turned down a proposal to grant Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf a 7 1/2% cost of living increase until other salary issues are settled.

Sikyta had proposed the increase so that three department heads could receive the full 7 1/2% wage increase and not violate a city charter provision. That provision, now under review by the Charter Revision Committee, states that the mayor must be the highest paid of any city department head. The mayor is paid $25,000 annually.

The Railroad Transportation Safety District (RTSD) board adopted a $2.9 million budget Monday which will center on relocating several railroad lines in west and Northwest Lincoln.

One project will consolidate Union Pacific and Burlington Northern tracks which run northwest out of Lincoln past the airport access road.

A second major project calls for construction of additional tracks around the Burlington yards in west Lincoln.

Construction of that line is the first step to abandoning the track across West O — a major irritant to West Lincoln businessmen. Burlington has been stepping up its coal train traffic across that artery, thus halting vehicular traffic to and from the area.

RTSD Director Marv Nuernberger said construction of the Burlington spur around the yards will cost $900,000. Federal funds are expected to pay $885,000 of that amount.

Another $510,640 has been budgeted for the airport tracks relocation, of which federal dollars will pay $435,740. The state will pay $51,950. The RTSD will pick up the remaining $22,950.

Overall, the board budgeted $1.9 million for relocation projects. Some $1.6 million in federal funds will pay most of the bill, the state will add another $51,950, leaving the RTSD to pay $150,450.

Another $40,000 was budgeted to help finance signals and other safety improvements at various railroad crossings in the county.

Nuernberger predicted that the $2.9 million budget will bring about a reduction in the mill levy from this year's .67 of a mill. During 1973-74, it is estimated the .67 mill levy will bring in $339,670.

But the slightly reduced levy for 1974-75 is anticipated to bring in $377,840, Nuernberger said. The district can levy up to .75 of a mill under state law.

Although the board approved the $2.9 million budget, actual cash expenditures are projected to take up $1.1 million. The remaining $1.8 million will be invested to finance future railroad projects.

Iron Horse Creek Appeal Bites Dust

The promoter of the Iron Horse Creek subdivision in east Lincoln lost his appeal Monday to develop that tract of land.

The City Council reiterated its opposition to the subdivision, which the lawmakers contend would constitute urban sprawl into rural areas around Lincoln.

At issue is the preliminary plat of the subdivision proposed by Robert Hall, located near 98th and Van Dorn. Hall appealed the City-County Planning Commission's denial to the council. The council sided with the planners.

In other action, the council restricted the type and size of signs which can be located in the G-1 Planned Commercial zoning district.

The council also:

- Ordinance, Third Reading
- Vacated 59th from Tangeman Terrace to Sunnyside Acres Add.
- Delayed two weeks accepting plat of Coddington Mill Add. near West A and Coddington Ave.
- Amended code relating to building standards.
- Vacated all that portion of Cadwallader's Court in Blk. 1, McMurry's Add., Lincoln, lying between 21st and Capital Parkway.
- Approved conveyance of that portion of Cadwallader's Court lying between 21st and Capital Parkway for $5,619.

Resolutions and Public Hearings

- Delayed one week amending special permit granted to John Hoppe on Briar West, Inc.
- Approved claims for June and July, 1974.

Ordinances, First Reading

- Vacating Sylvia from Adams to Nelson, Nelson from Sylvia to Helen, all east-west alley in Blk. 2, Cosgrove's Sub., Judson from Helen to 233 feet west and Judson from Helen to 20th.
- Creating improvement district in Van Dorn between 48th and 52nd.
- Creating paving district in Van Dorn between 48th and 52nd.

City Receives Haymarket Square Offers

The city has received two offers to renovate the so-called Haymarket Square block located on the northern edge of the central business district.

One offer came from a Sioux City firm to build a high-rise motor hotel and convention center. The second offer was made by the Journal-Star Printing Co., which is proposing to use a portion of the block for newspaper storage, parking and other related activities.

The block, from 9th to 10th, Q to R, is located directly north of the newspaper plant and is a city-owned block. The city garage and old police and fire stations are located there.

Last month the city advertised that it was interested in obtaining a long term lease for the block, dubbed Haymarket

Square by downtown consultants Barton-Aschman.

The Sioux City firm, Frances Building Co., headed by Robert Krueger, developed and operates the Rodeway Inn in downtown Sioux City. A Sioux City builder, John Holtze, made the offer to redevelop the block with Krueger.

The company said it would fireproof the convention complex and landscape the area. Construction could begin as soon as the land is cleared, they said in a letter to city property manager Dennis Fettingner.

Adam Llewellyn, general manager of the printing company, offered to purchase, lease, sub-lease or jointly own or operate the block with another developer.

Llewellyn said in a letter to the mayor and City Council that the use of the block would permit the paper to undertake some redevelopment projects.

He cited uniform landscaping along the southern side of Q between 9th and 10th, expediting the removal of telephone poles and power lines in the alleys and burying the lines underground and landscaping along 10th between P and Q.

Barton-Aschman consultants have labeled the Haymarket Square block a vital link between the interstate, the downtown, the university and the old town area.

The consultants suggested that the block would be an ideal site for a motel-hotel, parking lot or museum.

Scherer Tells How Clinton Plan Created

Some 2,210 hours have been spent in formulating the city's Clinton neighborhood redevelopment plan, which came under fire last week from several council members who said the plan was inadequate.

Community Development Director Leo Scherer said in a special report to the council that the Phase I plan was developed by his department, the planning department and the housing administrator's office. Additionally, residents of the area had a major say in the plan, Scherer said.

tracks, 27th to 33rd.

Plans call for the paving of several dirt streets with the aid of a 75% city subsidy, stepping up code enforcement, adding a park and increasing other city services.

Scherer reported that the department formulated the plan, on the basis that:

— the city would work closely with the Clinton Neighborhood Organization.

— Phase I would not make any major changes in the neighborhood.

— city funds, instead of state redevelopment money would be used so that project could get going.

In response to the council's queries on how it was determined that the city should pay 75% of paving costs and the property owners 25%, Scherer reported that formula came from the neighborhood association.

Scherer contended the subsidy is essential in order to pave those streets since a number of property owners are elderly and low income and could not pay the full cost.

Scherer again urged the budgeting of $13,000 to hire a redevelopment coordinator who would be charged with planning and designing the Clinton project and other redevelopment plans. Several lawmakers had questioned the desirability of hiring a coordinator.

In a related action Monday, the council approved a $55,378 Human Rights Commission budget and a $421,473 Auditorium budget.

Omaha Eyes Ticketing Pet Owners

Omaha officials are eyeing a better mousetrap, as it were, for keeping pet dogs and cats at home and off the streets.

The better mousetrap is a ticket system, Lincoln officials were told Monday.

Betty Phelps, director of the Omaha Humane Society, said the proposed ordinance would authorize her personnel and Omaha police officers to issue tickets to pet owners for violating animal control laws.

Tickets could be issued for allowing a dog to run at large, keeping an unlicensed dog, insufficient food or drink and shelter, cruelty to animals, allowing a female dog in season to run at large, harboring a vicious dog or barking dogs causing a nuisance.

Lincoln council members, the mayor and Humane Society Board members met to discuss ways in which Lincoln's dog and cat population can be better controlled.

Board member Ed Schwartzkopf said he would like to see how Omaha's ticketing program works out before implementing a similar program in Lincoln.

Phelps said, "The big problem is making the owner responsible." And the issuing of a ticket for violations is one step in that direction, she said.

She also said she did not favor a free spaying and neutering program sponsored by the humane society.

"If people can't afford to have the operation done, then they should stay with their dog or not let them out," she stated.

Lincoln board member Schwartzkopf suggested that Lincoln and Omaha should work toward implementing some statewide legislation aimed at controlling the state's pet population. He remarked that the pet problem does not stop at the city's borders.

$2.9 Million OKd As RTSD Budget

The Railroad Transportation Safety District (RTSD) board adopted a $2.9 million budget Monday which will center on relocating several railroad lines in west and Northwest Lincoln.

One project will consolidate Union Pacific and Burlington Northern tracks which run northwest out of Lincoln past the airport access road.

A second major project calls for construction of additional tracks around the Burlington yards in west Lincoln.

Hostage Willing To Die For Peace

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — One of the two hostages slain in a weekend escape attempt from the state prison here was a woman who gave her life for peace.

L. Carroll Pickett, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church where Julia Standley was memorialized, said her family "never dealt in ifs or buts or maybes. Nor have they tried to second-guess what might or should have been done."

Mrs. Standley and Elizabeth Beseda died Saturday night when three armed convicts tried to end their 10-day takeover of the prison library by parading their hostages to a waiting armored car. Two of the inmates died during the ensuing gunfight with law officers, and a Roman Catholic chaplain was seriously wounded.

In his eulogy, the Rev. Mr. Pickett sought to dispel possible sentiments that police may have acted without concern for the fate of the convicts' captives.

"The family is here to tell you today that unfair criticism has no place in this city, this state, in this nation," he said. "They are here to say that people like Judy Standley must be willing to die if peace, joy and life should exist in this world."

An overflow crowd of 300 persons attended the midmorning funeral services for Mrs. Standley. Among those attending were a number of the other hostages.

Earlier Monday, Justice of the Peace J.W. Beeler said he will rule suicide in the deaths of Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rudolfo Dominguez, two of the three convicts who staged the standoff. He said they were the ones who killed Mrs. Standley, 44, and Mrs. Beseda, 47.

Beeler said he will write "suicide" on the death certificates of Carrasco and Dominguez although "we probably will never know if they killed themselves or each other. They probably killed themselves, though."

The third convict in the escape attempt, Ignacio Cuevas, fainted at the height of the gun battle with prison guards and Texas Rangers. He suffered no injuries and was returned to a cell in the ivy-covered fortress he had tried to escape.

In another development, the Houston Police Department's bomb squad reported that the "bombs" Carrasco threatened to use during his unsuccessful escape attempt were fakes. Patrolman James C. Ashby, head of the squad, said none of the crudely made devices his group found would have exploded.

Rangers began an intense investigation Monday into how the convicts obtained the pistols.

Rosa Carrasco, wife of the slain gang leader, has been charged with supplying her husband with the weapons. She remained at large, the object of a widespread search.

Open Letter to Lincoln Market Advertisers:

When the weather is hot and business is slow, you need, more than ever, effective and efficient advertising.

The Lincoln Journal and Star, with an unduplicated daily coverage of over 79,000 homes in the Lincoln market, offers you this kind of result—producing advertising.

Your ad in the Journal and Star . . .

- Reaches 96% of your prospective customers in the metro market!
- Gets inside all the homes and not on the roof or under a bush!
- Goes into thousands of "security locked" high-rise apartments and condominiums because it is paid for, expected and wanted by resident readers!
- Does a 100% efficient job for you each time. No duplication! No fragmentation! Other Lincoln ad mediums split the customer market as much as 7 ways. Ad messages are divided, weakened and diluted. Actual customer contact is low, hard to prove and, on a per person reached and sold basis, extremely expensive!
- Produces more $$$ sales for each $ spent!
- Is exposed to the reader along with current news events, features, columns, comics and, like these daily happenings, is wanted and expected by the more than 250,000 folks who read our papers each day.

In these times of economic uncertainty, shortages, and high costs, your advertising dollars MUST do the job for you.

Firefighters Refused Reopening Of Pay Talks

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Rank and file city employees want 10%, the bus drivers want 25% and the firefighters want the chance to discuss the situation.

That's what city lawmakers were told Monday during a hearing on a proposed cost of living hike of 7½% for all city workers.

Although formal action on the ordinance is scheduled for next week, the majority of the council refused to reopen labor negotiations with the firefighters union. The vote was 5-2.

Council members Dick Baker, Sue Bailey, Helen Boosalis, Steve Cook and Bob Sikyta went along with Personnel Director Walt Mitchell's recommendation not to re-open the talks. Max Denney and John Robinson disagreed.

Under a two-year contract signed by the firefighters last year, the officers received 5% last year and will receive 7½% this year.

Iron Horse Creek Appeal Bites Dust

The promoter of the Iron Horse Creek subdivision in east Lincoln lost his appeal Monday to develop that tract of land.

The City Council reiterated its opposition to the subdivision, which the lawmakers contend would constitute urban sprawl into rural areas around Lincoln.

At issue is the preliminary plat of the subdivision proposed by Robert Hall, located near 98th and Van Dorn. Hall appealed the City-County Planning Commission's denial to the council. The council sided with the planners.

The proposed Iron Horse Creek development is the second semi-rural subdivision rejected by the lawmakers in recent months. The first was Rolling Greens, located southeast of 40th and the Rokeby Rd.

Both proposals met the statutory requirements for approval. Council members, however, denied the subdivisions on the presumption both would result in urban sprawl.

The city negotiating team, headed by Mitchell, did reopen talks with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, who also had signed a two-year contract.

Mitchell explained that there is no "need" to re-open negotiations with the firefighters since Lincoln salaries ranked sixth in a study of 14 comparably sized Midwestern cities.

Hobart Boswell, president of the union, contended that if the city grants a 10% increase to other city employees, firefighters will be receiving less of an increase.

10% Hike Sought

The 10% hike is being requested by the City Employees Association, a non-union organization representing some 300 City Hall workers.

CEA President Jim Visger noted that the city will be forced to pay increases of up to 25% for cars, 10% for paint and 40% for aluminum.

"Without these employees, what good are all these other commodities?" he asked.

While CEA is requesting a 10% increase, Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) drivers are putting in for 25%.

Joe Gray, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1293, reported that the group will be requesting a 25% increase when it meets with the city negotiating team for the first time this week.

Gray contended that a cutback in service two years ago and a further slash in service during the fuel crisis this winter forced drivers to lose money.

Reprimand

Mitchell reprimanded the union for appearing before the council first.

"This is not in the spirit of the proper approach to negotiations," the personnel director stated.

He defended the 7½% increase saying, "We have moved with the economy."

Before the council acts on the pay ordinance, it is expected that the lawmakers will request the Personnel Board to reconvene in an attempt to reach a majority recommendation on the issue.

At a special meeting last week, the board voted 2-1 to recommend the 7½% cost of living hike. Two members of the five-member panel were absent, however. Three votes are needed to refer a recommendation on to the council.

And in a related issue the council turned down a proposal to grant Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf a 7½% cost of living increase until other salary issues are settled.

Sikyta had proposed the increase so that three department heads could receive the full 7½% wage increase and not violate a city charter provision. That provision, now under review by the Charter Revision Committee, states that the mayor must be the highest paid of any city department head. The mayor is paid $25,000 annually.

City Receives Haymarket Square Offers

The city has received two offers to renovate the so-called Haymarket Square block located on the northern edge of the central business district.

One offer came from a Sioux City firm to build a high-rise motor hotel and convention center. The second offer was made by the Journal-Star Printing Co., which is proposing to use a portion of the block for newsprint storage, parking and other related activities.

The block, from 9th to 10th, Q to R, is located directly north of the newspaper plant and is a city-owned block. The city garage and old police and fire stations are located there.

Last month the city advertised that it was interested in obtaining a long term lease for the block, dubbed Haymarket

Square by downtown consultants Barton-Aschman.

The Sioux City firm, Frances Building Co., headed by Robert Krueger, developed and operates the Rodeway Inn in downtown Sioux City. A Sioux City builder, John Holtze, made the offer to redevelop the block with Krueger.

The company said it would fireproof the convention complex and landscape the area. Construction could begin as soon as the land is cleared, they said in a letter to city property manager Dennis Fetting.

Adam Llewellyn, general manager of the printing company, offered to purchase, lease, sub-lease or jointly own or operate the block with another developer.

Llewellyn said in a letter to the mayor and City Council that the use of the block would permit the paper to undertake some redevelopment projects.

He cited uniform landscaping along the southern side of Q between 9th and 10th, expediting the removal of telephone poles and power lines in the alleys and burying the lines underground and landscaping along 10th between P and Q.

Barton-Aschman consultants have labeled the Haymarket Square block a vital link between the interstate, the downtown, the university and the old town area.

The consultants suggested that the block would be an ideal site for a motel-hotel, parking lot or museum.

Scherer Tells How Clinton Plan Created

Some 2,210 hours have been spent in formulating the city's Clinton neighborhood redevelopment plan, which came under fire last week from several council members who said the plan was inadequate.

Community Development Director Leo Scherer said in a special report to the council that the Phase I plan was developed by his department, the planning department and the housing administrator's office. Additionally, residents of the area had a major say in the plan, Scherer said.

At a budget hearing last week, several lawmakers questioned the proposed $122,925 expenditure for sprucing up the area from Holdrege to the railroad tracks, 27th to 33rd.

Plans call for the paving of several dirt streets with the aid of a 75% city subsidy, stepping up code enforcement, adding a park and increasing other city services.

Scherer reported that the department formulated the plan, on the basis that:

- the city would work closely

$2.9 Million OKd As RTSD Budget

The Railroad Transportation Safety District (RTSD) board adopted a $2.9 million budget Monday which will center on relocating several railroad lines in west and Northwest Lincoln.

One project will consolidate Union Pacific and Burlington Northern tracks which run northwest out of Lincoln past the airport access road.

A second major project calls for construction of additional tracks around the Burlington yards in west Lincoln.

Construction of that line is the first step to abandoning the track across West O — a major irritant to West Lincoln businessmen. Burlington has been stepping up its coal train traffic across that artery, thus halting vehicular traffic to and from the area.

RTSD Director Marv Nuernberger said construction of the Burlington spur around the yards will cost $900,000. Federal funds are expected to pay $885,000 of that amount.

Another $510,640 has been budgeted for the airport tracks relocation, of which federal dollars will pay $435,740. The state will pay $51,950. The RTSD will pick up the remaining $22,950.

Overall, the board budgeted $1.9 million for relocation projects. Some $1.6 million in federal funds will pay most of the bill, the state will add another $51,950, leaving the RTSD to pay $150,450.

Another $40,000 was budgeted to help finance signals and other safety improvements at various railroad crossings in the county.

Nuernberger predicted that the $2.9 million budget will bring about a reduction in the mill levy from this year's .67 of a mill. During 1973-74, it is estimated the .67 mill levy will bring in $339,670.

But the slightly reduced levy for 1974-75 is anticipated to bring in $377,840, Nuernberger said. The district can levy up to .75 of a mill under state law.

Although the board approved the $2.9 million budget, actual cash expenditures are projected to take up $1.1 million. The remaining $1.8 million will be invested to finance future railroad projects.

Hostage Willing To Die For Peace

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — One of the two hostages slain in a weekend escape attempt from the state prison here was a woman who gave her life for peace.

L. Carroll Pickett, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church where Julia Standley was memorialized, said her family "never dealt in ifs or buts or maybes. Nor have they tried to second-guess what might or should have been done."

Mrs. Standley and Elizabeth Beseda died Saturday night when three armed convicts tried to end their 10-day takeover of the prison library by parading their hostages to a waiting armored car. Two of the inmates died during the ensuing gunfight with law officers, and a Roman Catholic chaplain was seriously wounded.

In his eulogy, the Rev. Mr. Pickett sought to dispel possible sentiments that police may have acted without concern for the fate of the convicts' captives.

"The family is here to tell you today that unfair criticism has no place in this city, this state, in this nation," he said. "They are here to say that people like Judy Standley must be willing to die if peace, joy and life should exist in this world."

rule suicide in the deaths of Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rudolfo Dominguez, two of the three convicts who staged the standoff. He said they were the ones who killed Mrs. Standley, 44, and Mrs. Beseda, 47.

Beeler said he will write "suicide" on the death certificates of Carrasco and Dominguez although "we probably will never know if they killed themselves or each other. They probably killed themselves, though."

The third convict in the escape attempt, Ignacio Cuevas, fainted at the height of the gun battle with prison guards and Texas Rangers. He suffered no injuries and was returned to a cell in the ivy-covered fortress he had tried to escape.

In another development, the Houston Police Department's bomb squad reported that the "bombs" Carrasco threatened to use during his unsuccessful escape attempt were fakes. Patrolman James C. Ashby, head of the squad, said none of the crudely made devices his group found would have exploded.

Rangers began an intense investigation Monday into how the convicts obtained the pistols.

Rosa Carrasco, wife of the slain gang leader, has been charged with supplying her husband with the weapons. She remained at large, the object of a widespread search.

Omaha Eyes Ticketing Pet Owners

Omaha officials are eyeing a better mousetrap, as it were, for keeping pet dogs and cats at home and off the streets.

The better mousetrap is a ticket system, Lincoln officials were told Monday.

Betty Phelps, director of the Omaha Humane Society, said the proposed ordinance would authorize her personnel and Omaha police officers to issue tickets to pet owners for violating animal control laws.

Tickets could be issued for allowing a dog to run at large, keeping an unlicensed dog, insufficient food or drink and shelter, cruelty to animals, allowing a female dog in season to run at large, harboring a vicious dog or barking dogs causing a nuisance.

Lincoln council members, the mayor and Humane Society Board members met to discuss ways in which Lincoln's dog and cat population can be better controlled.

Board member Ed Schwartzkopf said he would like to see how Omaha's ticketing program works out before implementing a similar program in Lincoln.

Phelps said, "The big problem is making the owner responsible." And the issuing of a ticket for violations is one step in that direction, she said.

She also said she did not favor a free spaying and neutering program sponsored by the humane society.

"If people can't afford to have the operation done, then they should stay with their dog or not let them out," she stated.

Lincoln board member Schwartzkopf suggested that Lincoln and Omaha should work toward implementing some statewide legislation aimed at controlling the state's pet population. He remarked that the pet problem does not stop at the city's borders.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
